Lancaster Farming

VOL. 24 No. 44 Lancaster Farming, Saturday, September 1, 1979 $7.00 Per Year

We're never too old or, apparently, too young to learn about handling hogs in a showring. With all the aplomb of a seasoned veteran, two-and-a-half year old Jason Wisser stepped into the ring to help his dad, Larry, of New Tripoli R1, show the judges what kind of hogs they had. Jason was a hit with spectators during swine competition Wednesday at the Allentown Fair.

Lehigh profits up; Coop now planning Consumer ad push

There's a new look to the balance sheet at the Lehigh Valley Cooperative Farmers, and in the next few weeks, there'll be a new look at the coop's packages, as well. More than 250 members were at the Lehigh Valley annual meeting in Allentown Tuesday night, to hear some heartening news from president Robert Barry.

"Lehigh, this year, is a winner," Barry said. "It has taken us longer than we had expected to get to this point. When I came here, we thought we could do the job in two years. We miscalculated. It took us five."

The coop had sustained heavy losses in the years between 1974 and 1977. In one 15-month period ending in March of 1974, the losses totalled some $5 million. Today, the picture has turned completely around, Barry told his audience. In the fiscal year ending January 31, 1980, Lehigh officials expect to earn well over a million dollars on sales of some $150 million.

Crucial to the turnabout has been the coop's strong private label business. The bulk of Lehigh's milk and dairy products are sold in cartons and packages bearing the names of other retailers.

That will not change, Barry told the meeting, but beginning September, the coop will begin an ambitious advertising program aimed at promoting the Lehigh name to consumers in its marketing area.

That program will cost some $2 million over the next three years. It will be aimed

Visit Berks, Lebanon, and Lancaster

Chinese ag group tours farms

By SALLY BAIR
Staff Writer

LEBANON Southeastern Pennsylvania was the scene this week for some international diplomacy. It was not as dramatic as shuttle diplomacy or the Camp David meetings, but the impact of the grass roots diplomacy may have a more profound impact on changing individual's lives.

A delegation of twelve men and two women from the People's Republic of China visited agricultural enterprises in Berks, Lancaster and Lebanon Counties as part of a dairy mechanization tour which is designed to take specific information back to China.

Interest of the Chinese was intense. They asked detailed questions of each host, and took copious notes. Many were seen making intricate diagrams of some of the interesting systems they encountered. Little escaped their notice.

According to Xing Chunhua, director of the Red Star Commune from which ten of the group came, the central purpose of the visit is to learn "the mechinization of dairying. We are very interested in milking machines and parlors, particularly the various forms of parlors." Within the Red Star Commune, there are nine dairy herds with 300 cows in each dairy. The animals are Holsteins and crossbreds which average about 1,200 pounds of milk per day, with about a 3.4 percent test. The Red Star Commune is not entirely unknown to some people from this area because it was visited by local residents who traveled to China last winter as part of the People-to-People agricultural tour.

Xing, speaking through an interpretor, added, "The farms here are mult-faceted, so we see many things. We think the family farms were very well managed. Obviously, the level of mechanization is high." Xing noted that agriculture in China is very labor-intensive, saying that the work averages four cows per man, although it is not divided as strictly at that.

Liu Ming, director of the Beijing State Farm Administration Bureau, echoed similar comments. "Family units here are well managed. We feel we've learned a great deal. We've seen farms with 20,000 head,

4-H, FFA contests at Allentown Fair

The Allentown Fair opened on Wednesday of this week for a seven-day run of food, fun, ferris wheels and farm competition.

There was a steady stream of visitors through Ag Hall, and according to a number of Fair regulars, more than the usual number of visitors to the livestock area.

Lancaster Farming was there for Wednesday's showring competitions. Some of those results appear below, others will be along next week.

There was spirited competition in the hog, dairy and beef shows, but there were a number of other competitions not usually seen at other fairs in the area. Champion rabbits, guinea pigs and pigeons wore their honors on their cages. There were plenty of sheep at Allentown, and probably more goats than you're likely to see in one place until next year's Allentown Fair.

In the 4-H dairy competition, the winners by breed were:

BROWN SWISS: Bryan Urmy of Coopersburg captured nine of the 15 awards for the breed, with his senior champion and reserve animals going on to win grand and reserve honors. Gary Urmy had the top intermediate calf, later named junior reserve, edged out for junior champ by Bryan's junior calf. Gayle Urmy showed the top junior yearling. Other winners included Scott Houseman with the top four-year-old, and Mark Wicks with the best five-year-old animal.

HOLSTEINS: Connie Ohlinger won eight out of 15 awards in Holstein competition, but lost the grand

Hallowell calls ag districting "key element" for land use

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell called the concept of Agricultural Districting a "key element" in state efforts to preserve farmland, during testimony before the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Rural Affairs this past Tuesday.

Commenting on Senate Bill 277, the Agricultural Districting Bill, Hallowell said, "Agricultural Districts established in the com-

"BRIGHTEN YOUR FUTURE"
Red & White Dairy Cattle Association
Box 63L, Crystal Spring, PA 15536

From mother to market, we formulate feeds and feeding programs with your profit in mind.

Does pork production represent a sizeable part of your income? Are you ready to devote an hour or so of your time planning for a more profitable future?

If your answer to both questions is yes, you owe it to yourself to read what we have to say.

Unlike many other feed companies, we develop feeding and management programs for each individual operation.

It all starts with a Pennfield man reviewing your operation with you. Your goals. Your records. Whether you farrow and finish your own pigs or buy feeder pigs. Your management practices. The health and overall condition of your herd. And other factors that have an effect on your profit potential.

With the aid of computers, we then design programs that can improve your profits by reducing expenses, improving performance, or both

For example, many producers who switched from a competitive program to a Pennfield program have cut their feed costs and their hogs go to market sooner. In effect, the Pennfield program is putting more money in their pockets.

There is no cost—or obligation—for this unique service. But you must take the first step by writing or phoning us. Do it today.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

SEPT. 3-9, 1979

A bit uncertain, so draw the curtains

Drive carefully now, kids start back to school this week Full moon Sept 6 Average length of days for the week, 12 hours, 54 minutes Total eclipse of the moon Sept 6, will be visible throughout most of continental U S It begins at 3 21 AM EST and ends at 8 29 AM EST Faul's are thick where love is thin

Ask the Old Farmer: From an old newspaper clipping of the notice of a wedding, I came across the word "skimmelton" Can you give its meaning? D B, Reading, Pa

Skimmington" variously spelled, is a very old word of English derivation It has several meanings, one of which is a sort of wild but harmless romping by night to make life a mite miserable for a newly married couple In many places in America they call such a thing a "charivari" or "shivaree,' depending on the place In our section they used to blow horns and yell blue murder, the main idea being to keep the newlyweds up

Home Hints: Chill leftover cooked cereal, then pan fry and serve with syrup

Omaha Cattle

August 30, 1979

CATTLE: Through midweek, slaughter steers were 1.00-1.50 lower, and heifers weak to 50 cents lower. However, late supplies steers and heifers not sufficient to reflect sharply increased demand created by upsurge in carcass trade after midweek. Cows close 2.00-4.00 lower, most decline on high-utility and commercial. Bulls were steady.

Four day receipts 13,600
Last week 15,200
A year ago 15,400

The fed cattle trade followed an erratic pattern. Prices were forced sharply downward the fore part of week as supplies expanded and carcass prices turned lower; however, a sizeable share of the early decline was regained on an active midweek session as marketings dwindled and carcass prices again pointed upward. Buyers were cautious and selective the fore part of week, but became aggressive at midweek to secure sufficient numbers for immediate slaughter requirements. There was mild feeder inquiry for two-way steers suitable for a short turn in the feedlot. The overall finish of the steer and heifer supply was rather attractive with a fairly liberal percentage choice. Steers made up approximately 47 pct. and heifers 30 pct. cows comprised 12 pct. and feeders 8 pct.

STEERS: On Monday, load choice and prime 3 1165 lbs. 66.25, load choice 3 1214 lbs. 66.50 late. At midweek, load and part load choice and prime 3-4 1100-1165 lbs. 65.50-65.75, load same grade 3-4 1150 lbs. 65.00 Choice 2-4 1000-1250 lbs. closed 63.50-65.00. Soil conservation vital to today's agriculture

"Agriculture, without soil conservation, is built on a system of self-destruction."

I don't remember who said it or when or why, but those words have remained lodged in my mind since I first came across them two years ago. It kind of sums up the situation in 12 words.

The simple fact is that without soil there is no farming. And good soil, like so many other posessions must be protected or it will be lost, never to be replaced.

All cleared and cultivated sloping land--and most of the land is sloping to some degree--is exposed to accelerated erosion by the elements of water and wind.

And today there is the problem of less land being available to farm every year, and one can't forget the growing world population that places more demands on farms and fields every year.

Most farmers realize that erosion can be a threat to their farmland but not all conceive of the severity of the problem nor the diligent care that is needed to handle such a menace.

The fact of the matter is, like everything else, good care of the soil, takes time and management. It may mean doing things a little different from year to year, or even day to day, and involve some new ideas, but the ultimate goal of preserving the soil in the fields will be realized.

And considering the fact that it takes between 500 and 1000 years to create one inch of topsoil from bedrock, and in Lancaster County alone, up to 27 tons of topsoil per acre per year can be eroded away, the safekeeping of this precious resource, is not something that should ever be taken lightly.

The battle is a continuous one, with nature and the elements on one side, and man, his needs, and technology on the other.

And when nature wins, man pays the price.

This Summer nature dealt a particularly bad blow to the Farmersville area where in July a storm took the opportunity to damage and destroy crops, robbing the fields of the needed topsoil

This week farmers met with soil conservation officials to find out what could be done to keep this ravaging of the fields from occuring again

My hat is off to those farmers who took the time from their busy schedules to attend such a meeting.

Soil conservation is one of those issues that easily can be tabled in a farmer's mind as something that can be put off until tomorrow. The fact that these farmers recognized the urgency of saving the soil today instead of tomorrow shows that they recognize the responsibility that they have.

Not only is it a farmer's duty to protect his soil from day to day, but as a good steward, he guards his land for the generations to come, so that they too someday will enjoy the labors of working with the land.

In these days of protecting resources, let's not forget the one that we find under our feet.

Interpretations for Sunday School Lessons

HOW GREAT THOU ART!

Lesson for September 2, 1979

Background Scripture:
Psalms 104;
Proverbs 3:19-26
8:22-31.
Devotional Reading:
Genesis 1:1-13.

A woman had been coming for counseling for some time and her tale of woe seemed unending. Each week she related a different chapter of pain, misery and disappointment. The counselor listened patiently until one day he stopped her in the middle of complaints, saying: "I think I have just the therapy for you: I suggest you take a trip to Niagra Falls and take a long, hard look at something bigger and greater then your own aches and pains!"

There are many people who might profit from that rather offbeat prescription: the monumental misery and unhappiness they experience in life needs to be placed in perspective with something much greater. This is one of the reasons why people need God: we need him so that we can see our lives in perspective. It is not that our lives are not important, that our aches and pains, hurts and disappointments are not justified — but that they are not quite so great and important when we see them in the light of God's own greatness.

Thou Art Very Great!

Actually, we need praise and revere God, not just to please him, but much more because we have a need to give God praise. We need it! Without it, we are denying ourselves something that is vital to our own well-being. The worshipper of God, thus, is blessed by his worship because there is something in all human beings that needs to acknowledge: "Bless the Lord, O my soul! O Lord my God thou art very great!" (Psalms 104:1).

As Long As I Live!

So the key to understanding worship is, not that God requires it of us, but that we require it for our own wellbeing. We need to praise God far more than he needs to have our praise. If we neglect that praise and reverence, we are the one who rob and cheat ourselves.

The Psalmist knew this and his ancient wisdom is as applicable to us today as it was in his own time:

I will sing to the Lord as long as I live;
I will sing praise to my God while I have being. (104:33)

Perhaps that is the secret of the amazing universal popularity of the song, "How Great Thou Art!" It is a beautiful and stirring melody, but the music is the servant of the words and the universal reality behind those words. It is more than mind and voice that are engaged: "Then sings my soul, my Saviour, God, to thee: How great Thou art! How great Thou art!"

It is the soul that sings God's praise because human beings can only begin to realize that greatness for which they were created when the can first acknowledge:

"HOW GREAT THOU ART!"

TO CONSIDER WINTER COVER CROP

Have you ever noticed the muddy water running from a hillside during a winter rains storm?? Open ground that is frozen at the time of a heavy rain or heavy snow melt during the Winter is very much exposed to serious soil erosion. This has happened on far too many farms in recent years. In order to correct this situation we suggest that the ground be growing some vegetation during the winter months. Sod fields will seldom suffer from soil erosion. The planting of a cover crop in the fall will give ground cover and prevent both water and soil losses. Crops such as any of the winter grains (barley, wheat or rye), or domestic ryegrass, or field bromegrass will grow late into the fall and develop good root systems. All of these can be grazed by livestock late into the fall and early next spring. Don't permit soil erosion because of open ground this winter.

TO BEWARE OF SILO GAS

Silo filling time is at hand and in the next month thousands of tons of corn silage will be put into silos. When we get this great amount of fermenting corn at one place there is often gases given off that are very dangerous. We urge farmers to caution their children and employees about this danger. Some of the gases are colorless and some are yellow in color; most of them are irritating to the eyes and respiratory system, and have the odor similar to laundry bleaches. Never enter a partly filled silo without running the blower or ventilating fans.

TO FLUSH EWE FLOCK

Sheep producers are in the breeding season now in order to have early spring lambs. The health of both of the ewe and the ram at mating time is very important for a large number of twin lambs. Every shepherd should aim for a 200% lamb crop; that is, two lambs raised per ewe. This requires very good care and some special treatments. Flushing of the ewes several weeks prior to being bred is one of them; this means the adding of extra grain to their ration, or turning them out on real good grass-type pasture. When the ewes are in a healthy, gaining condition at breeding time, they will be more likely to have twin lambs. In the spring, lambs have been selling at a very high price; every sheep producer should make a special effort now to have a large lamb crop to market.

TO STORE PESTICIDES CAREFULLY

For many gardeners and farmers the spraying season is about over for this year. Where do you plan to store your left-over chemicals? This can be a very important decision with major consequenses. If kept in various places in a very reckless manner, it can result in the poisoning of some of your family, or some of your livestock. This should not be allowed to happen under good management. All spray materials should be stored is a separate room or building and kept under lock and key. By all means keep them away from feed and seed supplies. Too many times some of the chemical pellets are mis-used in livestock feeds. Be careful with all spray materials and store them away from any chance mis-use.

Tax bill may represent savings for poultrymen

WASHINGTON, D.D.—In spite of the temptation for Congress to offer sweeping tax cuts the Administration has taken the position that such a move should not be considered at this time, as it would only serve to fuel inflation. A bill has been worked up, however, by Congressmen Jones (D-Oklahoma) and Conable (R-New York) that would include a tax cut for businesses, including farming businesses, as a means of fighting inflation.

The principle of the bill is simple; if production of goods and services is stimulated by encouraging capital investment, inflationary pressure could be eased. Although no one would contend that egg production needs to be stimulated at this time, increased capital investment in other segments of the economy would be beneficial to the public as a whole, not to mention the opportunities that would be presented for diversified investments by persons in the egg industry.

The Jones-Conable bill (HR 4646) seeks to accomplish this by allowing businesses to write off the cost of assets at a faster rate than is currently allowed. The bill would also simplify the IRS' asset depreciation range ("ADR") system, narrowing the present 130 classes of assets to just 3 classes, which would cover all depreciable business property.

For example, the bill would allow barns and other farm buildings to be written off over a ten-year period, and farm machinery, equipment, grain bins and fences, five years Under present IRS rules for ADR depreciation the minimum periods are 20 and 8 years, respectively, although most farmers don't use the complex and rigid ADR system.

Another feature of the bill is its treatment of the investment tax credit. While the types of property eligible would remain the same, the Jones-Conable bill would increase the amount of credit for some of that property. The full 10% credit would apply to property depreciated over five or more years (currently it is seven or more) and would increase the credit for property depreciated over three to five years from 3.3% to 6%. Another important provision of the bill is the elimination of salvage value, which would allow farmers to depreciate property down to zero.

The bill is called the "Cost Recovery Act of 1979", and has gained at least 140 co-sponsors in the House. The provisions of the bill could benefit the egg industry and the American economy if it is passed.

A NOTE ON INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT—The Revenue Act of 1978 amended the Tax Code by making single-purpose agricultural structures, including poultry and egg production facilities, eligible for the investment tax credit. Prior to this change, considerable confusion had resulted as the IRS sought to deny the credit on such structures. The IRS is now formally taking the position, in private letter rulings, that egg producing facilities are eligible for the investment tax credit. The credit applies to structures placed in service after August 15, 1971.

External parasite survey and study to be done

UNIVERSITY PARK — Dairy and beef producers in 18 Pennsylvania counties are being asked to take part in a survey to determine current pesticide use patterns against various pests, it was announced today by Dr. Lowell L. Wilson, professor of animal science at Penn State.

The following is a list of the eighteen counties which will be asked to cooperate in the beef and dairy pesticide-cattle-parasite study: Mercer, Tioga, Susquehanna, Indiana, Centre, Schuylkill, Crawford, Bradford, Butler, Somerset, Washington, Franklin, York, Berks, Lancaster, Wayne, Mifflin, Northampton.

The following counties will participate in the beef pesticide study: Erie, Warren, Lycoming, Lawrence, Dauphin, Northumberland, Lehigh, Greene, Westmoreland, Adams, Chester.

Other counties may be added at a later date

Some of the major factors to be evaluated will be pesticides and formulations used; frequency and rates of application; method of application; and cost of materials and treatments. Primary pests are flies, lice, mange, ticks, and grubs.

The survey, conducted by The Pennsylvania State University's College of Agriculture, is designed to determine the economic impact on the dairy and beef industry if particular pesticides were removed from the market, Wilson points out.

Current pesticide use and management patterns by beef and dairy producers will be determined, along with an evaluation of the effectiveness of these insecticides and practices in achieving satisfactory control.

"The Environmental Protection Agency is considering the removal of restrictions of certain pesticides," Wilson emphasizes. "Hearings on the effectiveness of such insecticides as dimethoate, lindane, toxaphene, carbaryl, ronnel, and tricholorofon will be scheduled in the future. The survey will assist EPA in making decisions on which chemicals may be eliminated."

With registered altenatives to these compounds, the cost-benefit ratio associated with the loss of these compounds must be assessed. No previous estimates of the frequency and type of insecticide use on beef and dairy cattle in Pennsylvania have been determined. This information will assist EPA with their evaluations of various insecticides.

"Nationally, beef and dairy producers lose approximately 2.5 billion dollars annually from insects such as ticks, lice, and flies," he points out. "It is important to the economy to keep these losses to a minimum."

Both the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association and Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association have endorsed the survey, and encourage producers to reply to the survey.

New silos boost Pennfield storage capacity

Workmen are still putting finishing touches on a series of mammoth storage elevators at Pennfield Corp.'s plant near Lancaster. When the structures are completed, the firm will have one of the largest capacity feed plants in the Northeast, according to company officials.

With the explosive increase in chicken numbers in Southeastern Pennsylvania, a rail or truck strike, or a serious snowstorm, could create serious problems for poultrymen cut off from normal feed supplies.

"Feed trucks can generally make it through to farms no matter what the weather," notes Ken Greenwood, production manager for Pennfield, Inc. "But if we run out of ingredients, we're in trouble and our customers are in trouble.

When we built our new manufacturing facility three years ago at Lancaster's Hempfield Industrial Park, we knew eventually we'd need more storage capacity. Well, we've spent the summer building it, and it will be ready by October 1. When we're done, Pennfield will have one of the largest feed mills in the East".

Over the summer, five silos were erected at the Hempfield site. Four of the structures, each 100-feet high and 24-feet in diameter, stand in a cluster. They will hold such feed ingredients as soybean meal, gluten meal and wheat middlings. The cluster will have a storage capacity of 4,750 tons of ingredients, according to Greenwood.

The fifth silo dwarfs the other four in the cluster. Although only 10 feet higher than the cluster, the big silo is 60 feet in diameter and will hold 6,750 tons of corn - a quarter of a million bushels.

And it's all for chicken feed.

While they were increasing storage at Hempfield, they were also boosting production capacity by some 80 percent, nearly double what it had been, Greenwood pointed out.

"We've been able to keep up with our customers' demands," he said, "but we are running the Hempfield plant 24 hours a day. And we've been straining the people and equipment at our other facilities in York, Palmyra and Rohrerstown."

When the new silos are ready in October, Pennfield's storage capacity will be five times what it is now, Greenwood said "Right now, with normal production, we can empty out completely in two days. With our new elevators, we'll have a 10-day cushion."

The expanded plant will have a tremendous appetite for corn, Greenwood noted. Running 24 hours a day, the Hempfield facility has been producing feed at the rate of 60 tons an hour. After October, they should be able to keep up with demand on an 18-hour schedule.

All the feed goes to chickens - both laying hens and broilers - within an 80-mile radius of the plant. Most of the corn used in the mill also comes from farms in Lancaster and surrounding counties.

Greenwood takes pride in the fact that the new silos were erected largely by local college students on their summer breaks. "These structures were put up with a slipforming process," he said. "It's a technique not too common here in the East, so we had the design work done by a firm in Atlanta, and the actual construction was handled by

Producers make the difference in egg promotion

An important crossroads in the history of the American Egg Board has been reached – and now is the time for all egg producers to show their support for the accomplishment of the AEB programs. As you have probably read, a bill has been introduced by Congressman Baldus, of Wisconsin, to allow the assessment for funding of AEB to be increased (by producer vote) to 7½ cents for 1979 and no more than ¾ cents each year, up to a limit of 10 cents.

The UEP Board of Directors has voted to support the amendment, and urges you to consider the following facts.

First, per capita consumption of eggs increased by six eggs in 1978 – prior to that, it had decreased an average of four eggs per year for nearly 30 years! For the last 18 months, per capita consumption has exceeded the previous year's level – nothing even close to that has happened before!

Second, "The Incredible Edible Egg" has become a familiar jingle to millions of Americans, through television, radio, magazine and newspaper promotions. Merchandising materials of all descriptions are being used by state and regional organizations, as well as numerous producers, to carry the message further. Long-range efforts, including nutrition research, food service promotions, institutional recipe development, consumer education programs, new product and export development, and state and regional cooperative funding programs have laid the groundwork for future progress, in addition to their contribution to AEB's unquestionable success.

Finally, AEB has generated additional revenues and profits for the entire industry, a fact which all producers must recognize and act upon. Already, nearly two cents of every assessment nickel has been lost to inflation since AEB's inception. If the program is to grow, or even maintain its present level, producers must pay the bill, an investment well worth the money. AEB is an industry self-help program, no government subsidies or loans of any kind, an additional fact of which producers can be proud.

It took five years for the original checkoff bill to go from first drafting to the President's signature. The amendment will also take some time, and inflation will continue. Every producer has a stake in this effort. You will be called upon to contact your legislators for support in the near future. But for the present, the priority is to lend your own support and to obtain the support of fellow producers in your area.

The incredible edible egg.

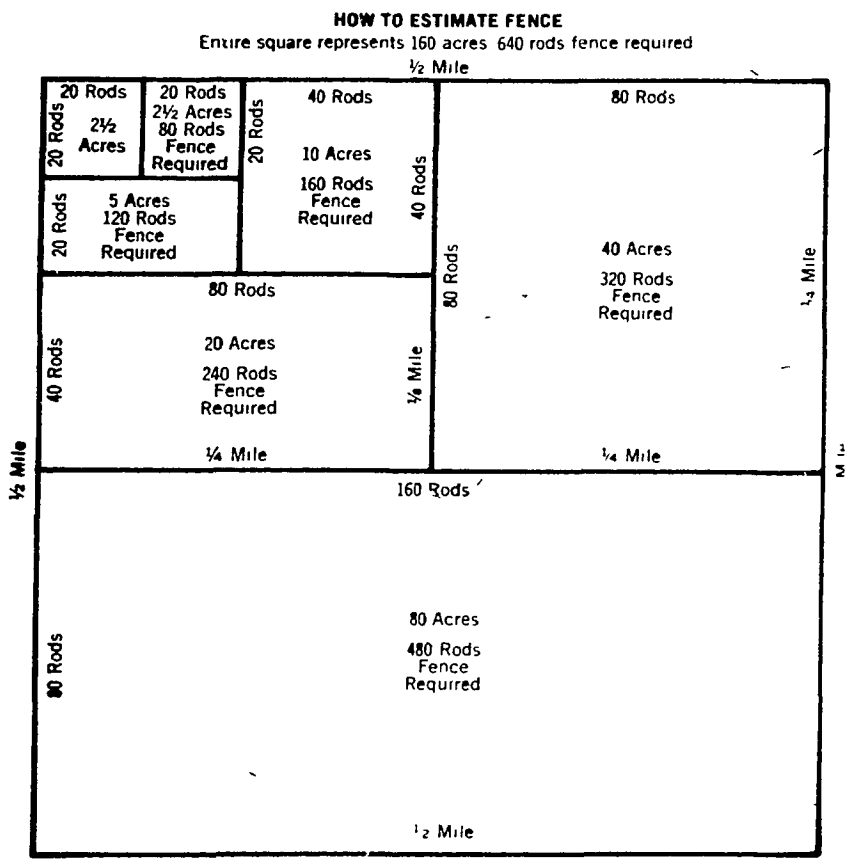
Zinc coating is important to fence life

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio—How long it will last is probably your prime consideration when you buy fencing. For added service life, all manufacturers coat their wire fence products with zinc for corrosion resistance. However, that coating weight varies considerably from one manufacturer to another.

Corrosion experts say that the thickness of the zinc coating on the wire is the single most important factor in determining its life before rusting and hence its overall life. The coating thickness is not very visible to the eye, but it's directly related to how long the fence will last in the atmosphere. The thicker the coating, the longer the life.

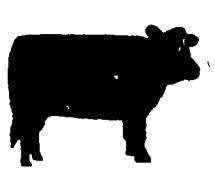
Over the years as the fence is exposed to the weather, the zinc gradually wears away until the bare wire is exposed. As long as there's zinc on the wire, it's protected from corrosion. However, when moisture and rain can get to the bare wire without any zinc around, the wire will begin to corrode.

Actual cost of the zinc is small compared to the cost of the finished fench product. However, manufacturers are limited to how much zinc they can apply using conventional processes. If the zinc coating is too thick, it will craze and flake off when the wire is bent as during fence fabrication. A small amount of aluminum added to the molten zinc bath allows a thicker coating to be applied without danger of its peeling off when bent.



Here's a diagram to help you quickly estimate your fencing needs for most any size land plot. Armco advises using good materials for a durable, long-lasting farm fence. It may cost a little more initially, but it will pay for itself in the long run.

Recently an independent consumer testing laboratory compared the coating weight on ten different manufactueres' wire products. For a copy of the results of the test or for more information on the importance of coating weight to fence life, contact Jack Campbell at Armco's Western Steel Division, 7000 Roberts Street, Kansas City, Missouri 64125. (816) 483-5100.



Woven wire field fence is the ideal lower fencing for cattle containment. One strand of barbed wire at the top can prevent "fence riding". These fences usually range from 48 to 54 inches high.

The storm that hit during July moved up to two feet of soil from this cornfield.

Farmers from the surrounding Farmersville area talk to Aaron Stauffer, chairman of the Lancaster Conservation District. The men met to discuss ways to combat erosion problems in the area.

Conservation explained at farmers' meeting

FARMERSVILLE - On July 21 this Summer, a storm swept through the Farmersville area of Lancaster County, causing extensive damage to fields and crops.

Wednesday evening a meeting was held for interested farmers, giving them a chance to meet with members of the Lancaster Conservation District, the ASCA, and the Soil Conservation Service, in order to take action to prevent such storm damage in the future.

According to Aaron Stauffer, chairman of the Lancaster Conservation District, it was a "good meeting".

"The farmers showed interest," he commented, "and hopefully they will put the practices to use."

He noted that many conservation practices were covered, and stressed that the practice of cropland terraces was covered. "More and more row crops are grown, especially corn," he added.

The meeting began with a audio-visual demonstration, telling of the plunder of the soil of the United States, and explained the creation of the Soil Conservation Service and the soil conservation districts.

Warren Archibald, representing the Soil Conservation Service, explained the practices of contour strips, grass waterways, water management structures, terraces, and pipe outlets. He told the value of each practice in the fight against soil erosion.

Stauffer took the stage to talk about the role of the conservation districts. Again the benefits of conservation were stressed to the 30 or so farmers in attendance.

From the Lancaster ASCS office, Ray Brubaker, who also spoke, reflected that he too felt the response to the meeting was good. He added that there was a need for soil conservation practices in that area.

"Without soil conservation practices," Aaron Stauffer commented, "farmers are the losers."

Chinese ag group

middle sized herds and small dairies."

Liu said that problems are similar in dairy herds in China and in the United State, but he acknolwedged that "the United States has advantages. Conditions for feeding are somewhat ahead and more convenient."

Liu pointed out that their cows are fed corn silage, hay, sorghum grain, soybean cake and wheat bran.

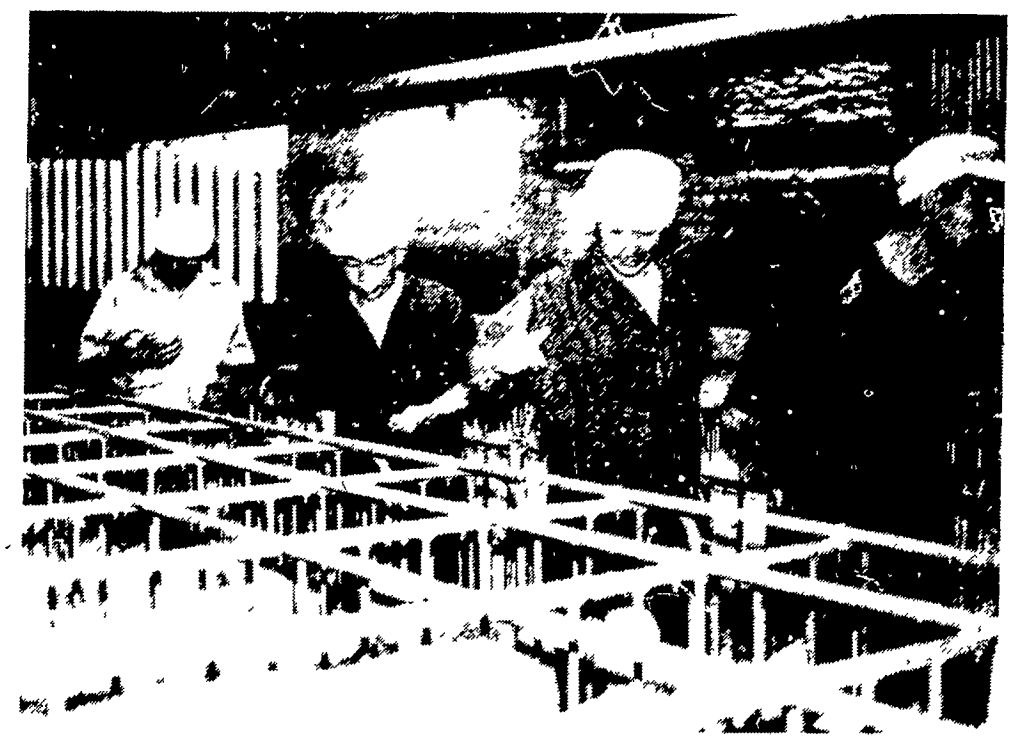
Acting as a local host and interpreter for the group was Bill Hinton, Fleetwood R2, author of five books on China and a frequent visitor there. Hinton, who went first to China at age 17, returned there during the War and again as a tractor technician for United Nations Relief for seven years before returning home in 1953. He said that while the group is here primarily to see dairying, "They are interested in all kinds of farming. They are interested in making a few breakthroughs in dairy mechanization. They do some very sophisticated farming, but it is labor intensive and they expend more labor to do it. China's been farming for 4,000 years."

The group was accompanied from China by Hinton's sister Joan and her husband Irving (Sid) Engst, who have lived and worked with the Chinese for 30 years.

Engst, who is presently with the Chinese Ministry of Agriculture organized the trip with contacts in this country. It was paid for by a budget from Liu's office, and hosted, in part, by the U.S. - China People's Friendship Association, of which there are chapters across this country.

Joan said, "This is to learn about dairy mechanization at the grass roots level, and to see farmers work. They have stayed in homes and took part in milking."

Engst added, "We will try to get model farms going when we return; farms which are far advanced over the average. Our purpose is to study the best of what the United States has." He explained that they will purchase some American equipment and will make some equipment to help move toward more mechanization.



Visitors toured the Pennfield Hog Research Facility at Mountain View Farm, Frystown, as part of their visit in Southeastern Pa.

At each stop the Chinese showed great interest in the farming operation. They were courteous and friendly, and despite the language barrier, seemed genuinely pleased with the hospitality of their hosts.

Xing said, "Our American friends were extremely warm. We are eating well and enjoying it. The first 20 days went very quickly." Xing added, "It is all interesting - not just the cows, but the whole agricultural scene.

It is not difficult to understand why the time is going quickly. The group arrived in the United State on August 9 and will depart September 18. They have already spent one week in the Chino Valley in California, and one week in the Madison, Wisconsin, area. They are in Pennsylvania for nearly one week and will travel to New York state, the home of Engst, and spend two weeks living with four farm families there. They have managed trips to Disneyland and Philadelphia and will see New York City before returning to China.

They will not return empty-handed. They will have their ever-present notebooks filled to overflowing with facts, statistics and figures.

Most of the visitors were technical workers, including dairy equipment technicians, animal husbandry workers, forage technicians and engineers. Twelve of the group was from the Beijing city leadership, one is from the city of Sian and one is in the Ministry of Farm Machinery, working on its research farm.

Liu explained that the city of Beijing includes an eight-county area surrounding the city which makes up a large portion of a province. There are 3,800,000 peasants in the outlying district and 5,000,00 city residents. There 280 communes, or farm cooperative units in this geographical area, with 16 state-managed and under his directorship.

At Fernhost Farm, operated by Albert Moyer, in Lebanon County, the visitors were enthralled with each piece of large equipment. They watched demonstrations of it being operated and asked specific questions including the cost of the equipment.

Moyer told about his 80-cow milking herd and showed the group some outstanding cows. Perhaps the thing which stirred the most attention was his mention that they just successfully transplanted two embryos from a cow. This generated a lot of questions from the Chinese, with one man taking a specific interest in the details involved. Hinton explained, "They don't have the genetic background to choose from." The interested Chinese later with County Extension Agent Newton Bair and questioned him more thoroughly, through Engst, on the procedure. All cows are currently bred with artificial insemination.

Moyer also hosted the Chinese to a chicken barbecue lunch, which they seemed to eat with gusto.

At the Hershey Bare farm at Lebanon R2, the visitors took the opportunity to drive a tractor. One of the women in the group is a tractor driver with the commune.

They also visited the Dutch Country Egg Factory and Pennfield's Hog Research Facility at Mountain View, Farm, Frystown. There, the Chinese visitors gamely took the required shower and changed into the coveralls and sneakers provided for disease prevention. There was much laughter and good-natured joshing about their appearances.

After touring the facilities which produce 9-10,000 fat pigs a year, they asked extensive questions of Melvin Huber, farm manager. They wanted to know how much feed it takes Wendy Yoder, right, made nearly a complete sweep of the 4-H Milking Shorthorn competition on Wednesday at the Allentown Fair. She needed an assist from Durell Hammond, an Australian exchange student helping out on the Yoder farm, to show off her grand and reserve champion.

AYRSHIRE: Only one lonely Ayrshire, shown by Lois Heyer, Kutztown, showed up for the judging. She was a junior yearling, and judged fine enough to deserve a junior champion ribbon.

JERSEY: Gary Kurtz, Fleetwood, and Patricia Jenkins, Toughkenamon, showed the grand and reserve champions respectively, a pair of animals that had previously captured senior grand and reserve awards. The top junior calf was shown by Bruce Heller, who also had the best five-year-old. Intermediate calf honors went to James Bavey, Downingtown. Helen McCahon, Downingtown, had the top junior yearling, but finished reserve champion behind Bavey's calf. Henry Heyer, Kutztown, showed both the top senior yearling and the best two-year-old.

MILKING SHORTHORN: Wendy Yoder, Shoemakersville, swept all but two of the awards for this breed. Her brother, Frederick, showed the best senior calf and the best five-year-old. Everything else, from grand champion down to junior calf, went to Wendy.

4-H members converged on the Alltntown Fair Wednesday for a showmanship and fitting competition.

In the fitting contest, the winners were: junior fitting, Lee Schlappich, Mohrsville; intermediate, Michael Mertz, Fleetwood; senior, Brian Ruch, New Ringgold, with Mertz grand champion and Ruch reserve.

The Curtiss tradition continues ...

with 27 "C-NOTE" Sires

That's the story! Just as surely as a C-Note is a $100 bill, no less than 27 Curtiss Holstein bulls came out of USDA's July 1979 sire summary with predicted differences of plus $100 or more. Mostly more.

Twenty-one of the 27 have predicted differences for type. And 20 of the 21 are "plus for type" as well as plus $100 or more!

Add in deep, strong, popular pedigrees and you have what might be called a "Holstein breeders' A.I. program."

Exact nuts-and-bolts figures are set up, for your quick convenience, in the chart below. All available data on all Curtiss bulls are yours for the asking. Please ask your Curtiss Distributor today.

to produce meat (3 lbs. to 1 lb. pork, live weight). They learned that there is 35 square feet of space per litter, two square feet per pig in the nursery, and five and one half square feet per pig in the finishing areas. When they inquired about disease prevention, Huber said, "The biggest factor in disease is traffic. We never wear outside clothes inside. That's why we asked you to change." He also explained their vaccination procedures.

In Lancaster County, they visited Triple G Dairy, John Landis, Glenn C. Hershey and Barley Brothers. They toured New Holland Machine Company and saw Way-Har farms and the John Stump farm in Berks County. They will also visit the Gaspari Brothers mushroom operation, Lehigh Valley Dairy and Robert J. Heffner 1,000 head beef operation.

If there is time, Hinton, who is hosting the delegation in Berks County during their visit here, would like to show his no-till corn, as well as his extensive crop and diversion terraces and waterways.

Carl Wenger, president of Wenger Implement, hosted the Chinese group to a clambake and a visit to his home and machinery operation. He said, "It fascinated them. They have us marked as very wasteful and we showed them that we buy tractors and dismantle them to sell parts all over the United States and Canada. This impressed them more than anything. They said it was the most economical thing they had seen in the U.S." Wenger noted that the Chinese felt he was offering a service to the people.

They also visited grain drying equipment installed by Martin Distributors. Ivan Martin explained their plans to install a solar collector to put to use the hot air from the peak of the barn for grain drying.

When it was time to depart, gifts were pressed on the American hosts by the Chinese guests. They had sincere expressions of their appreciation for what they had learned. The hosts, in turn, were flattered by the intelligent questions and sincerity shown by the Chinese guests. Although not one word was spoken directly, the smiles and the gestures were enough. The diplomacy was successful on both sides.

Liu summed up his colleague's feelings when he said, "We have received terrific hospitality. We feel we have been welcomed very warmly."

It was an auspicious time for Chinese-American relations.

Albert Moyer, Lebanon, takes the Chinese visitors for a ride on his corn harvester, as he demonstrates some of his equipment.

EPA restricts pesticide uses

NEWARK, Del., — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (E.P.A.) has recently classified certain uses of 36 pesticides for restricted use, and has proposed such classification for 18 others.

The E.P.A. classifies a pesticide "for restricted use" when the agency decides the directions on the label are not sufficient to protect humans or the environment from harm if the chemical is used by untrained hands. Only certified applicators are permitted to use such restricted products.

Persons who need to use pesticides may undergo special training to become certified applicators. In Delaware about 1800 growers are certified as private applicators, and about 400 persons are certified as commercial applicators.

Amond the pesticide uses classified for restricted use are: liquid formulations of Furadan with 40 percent or greater concentrations; liquid Disyston; liquid Mocap; liquid Nemacur; liquid Dyfonate; and liquid Thimet.

Pesticide uses recently proposed for restricted use classification include: Temik granules with ten percent or greater concentrations; Furadan granules with two percent or greater concentrations; carbon disulfide (= bisulfide) for grain fumigation or rat and woodchuck control purposes; Dyston granules with ten percent or greater concentrations; Mocap granules and fertilizer mixtures with greater than three percent concentration; Nemacur granules with ten percent or greater concentrations; Dyfonate granules with five percent or greater concentration; Monitor liquids containing 40 percent or greater concentrations; greenhouse uses of nicotine (alkaloid) of 14 percent or greater concentrations; Vydate liquids with 24 percent or greater concentrations; Thimet granules of five percent or greater concentrations; all dry and liquid formulations of Abate; and granular Counter with 15 percent or greater concentrations.

Neither of these listings is complete, so growers should be sure to check labels on pesticide products.

Complete listings appear in the August 1, 1979, Federal Register, which is available in many libraries. The list of classified uses appears on pages 45131-45133, while the proposed list appears on pages 45218-25224. The comment period on the proposed classification ends October 1, 1979.

Allentown Fair

Results in the showmanship contest were: junior, Tamara S. Miller, Kutztown; intermediate, Constance Ohlinger, Mohrsville; senior, William Zollers, Jr., Mertztown, with Constance Ohlinger grand champion and Cathy Ohlinger reserve.

Also held Wednesday was the Lehigh County 4-H Dairy Roundup. Top winners in that contest were: junior best of show, Brian Dietrich with a junior yearling Holstein; and senior best of show, Bryan Urmy, with a three-year-old Brown Swiss.

Henny Heyer had both the grand champion Jersey, a two-year-old, and the reserve, a four-year-old.

Bryan Urmy had the top Brown Swiss, a three-year-old, and the reserve as well, a senior yearling.

The grand champion Ayrshire was shown by Lois Heyer, the only entry, a junior yearling.

There was a good turnout for the FFA market hog show on Wednesday at the Allentown Fair, and spirited competition for the ribbons and trophies.

Tim Wessner of New Tripoli dominated the fitting and showing competition, taking the grand champion prizes in both. Donald Haas, Orefield, was reserve champion in both categories.

Haas also had the top medium weight and heavy weight swine, and captured both the grand and reserve ribbons for market hogs. His brother, Ronald Haas, had the best pair.

Champion gilts, by breed were: Landrace, Cheryl Wessner, New Tripoli; Hampshire, Cheryl Wessner; Duroc, Terry Adams, Mertztown; Poland, Tim Wessner.

Laundering tips make easier wash day

MEDIA - New miracle machine-washable synthetic fibers have made wash days a lot easier, according to experts, but just a few laundering mistakes can be very costly. To help you avoid these mistakes, here are some laundering tips.

Absolute no-no's - No Levis mixed with delicate fabrics.

-Don't jam everything into one wash load. Clothes need room to move and flex in the tub.

-Don't mix dark colors with whites, unless you're really fond of the "dingy-gray" shade.

-Don't pour bleach or fabric softener directly onto clothing in the washer. Direct contact with bleach can cause white splotches on your colored items and holes in others. Direct contact with fabric softeners can leave colored blobs on white clothing.

Absolute Do's - Sort and separate clothing items by color, fabric and weight.

-Pre-treat stains before washing.

-Do use enough detergent. Follow the manufacturer's suggestions on the package.

-Always check for washing instructions on the garment label.

-Do your laundering fairly often, or you may find "difficult to remove" soils and stains have turned into "impossible to remove" stains.

The Pennsylvania Cooperative Extension Service offers educational programs and materials without regard to race, color, sex or national origin and is also an equal opportunity employer.

New silos boost

a company from Sioux City, Iowa.

"Normally, the construction company would bring along a crew of unskilled laborers to handle the heavy work. But we insisted that they recruit local work crews, and most of the two dozen or so laborers were college kids home from the summer. We even had five or six women in the crews."

Like the feed mill, the slipform crews worked around the clock. Concrete trucks from the Kurtz Brothers plant in Ephrata rumbled over a continuous day-and-night route for a month while construction was going on.

The concrete was poured over a skeleton of interlocking steel reinforcing bars placed inside the form, a double-walled steel ring as big around as the silo.

As the concrete at the bottom of the form hardened, the form was gradually slipped up, hence the term "slipform". The form moved upward at the rate of an inch every five minutes.

In all, the new silos consumed some 1,700 cubic yards of high density concrete, with another 500 yards used in the pouring of a massive underground pad which serves as a foundation.

Slipforming was some 30-percent cheaper than the more usual methods of construction, Greenwood said, with no sacrifice in structural strength.

Household remedies to aid iron problems

WEST CHESTER—Iron in water can interfere with household cleaning and grooming routines It can cause staining of plumbing fixtures, washers and dishwashers; discolor fabrics during laundering; impart a yellow cast to dinnerware and give water an objectionable taste. There are permanent solutions and temporary remedies to these problems.

As a chemical constituent of water, iron comes from both natural sources and manmade sources—rusting of pipes, water heaters, other objects of cast iron and steel, and industrial wastes.

Iron is present in water in two forms—ferrous or ferric. In the ferrous form (dissolved), the solution is nearly colorless and generally causes little monwealth could well be the foundation upon which Pennsylvania's efforts to preserve agricultural land is built."

Hallowell calls ag districting "key element" for land use

The Agriculture Secretary added that Agricultural Districting "will not be the final answer, but only a step toward the final solution" of this highly important issue.

Hallowell said that with the concept of agricultural districting, flexible and aggressive farming activities should be permitted. "The right to farm after Agricultural Districts are created is mandatory if we are to preserve agricultural land. Unless we preserve the farmer and his right to farm, any legislation to preserve agricultural land will only lead to failure," he said.

"Pennsylvania's farmland is under increasing pressure from urban growth and expanding needs for supporting facilities such as highways, airports, power plants and residential, industrial and recreational areas. Demands for food and fiber for domestic and export needs add to the crisis facing a nation with a shrinking supply of good land," he noted.

Agricultural districting is a variation of the farm zone concept, with a critical difference, according to Hallowell. "Participation in agricultural districting is voluntary and usually formed via petitions on the part of landowners or local governments. It combines the positive incentives to encourage farming, such as preferential assessment and relief from nuisance regulations, with negative disincentives to discourage non-farm activities."

Hallowell also noted that agricultural districting has the advantage of good political and public acceptance, since districts can only be created based on the will of a group of landowners. It is imperative that local officials be given the tools to use their own initiative in farmland preservation efforts, as they are best suited to determine the optimum usage of local land resources.

The first step in any land preservation program, Hallowell said would require an inventory of the areas which ought to be preserved as well as an expression of the willingness of the landowners involved to participate. "By the simple fact of establishing themselves in an Agricultural District, landowners will have answered those two questions for us. Local officials will then be able to enter into a dialogue with the individuals to establish an appropriate preservation method," he said.

NUTRI-SIL
SILAGE INOCULANT

"Nature's Way To Better Silage"

For years, it has been known that the secret to silage success is bacterial fermentation of a very special kind. Until economic considerations focused attention on the specific process by which good silage is produced, it was not realized that Livestock Producers could CONTROL the development of silage — even during its most critical stages of refinement — the first 36 hours.

Nutri-Sil is safe, easy to apply, and adds to what you can expect to gain from this year's silage.

"Leaders in Animal Nutrition"

1. Cutting the crop. Feeding silage offers you the advantage of being able to cut your crop before protein digestibility and palatability are reduced by overmaturity. Use this to your advantage by cutting near the following recommendations:

Product	Maturity	Moisture
Corn	Early dent	68-72%
Forage Sorghum	When leaves begin to turn	70-74%
Clover	½ heads in bloom	70-80%
Alfalfa	1/10 heads in bloom	70-80%
Cereal Grains	milk to soft dough	70-80%
High moisture ear corn	milk to soft dough	40-42%
Grass	when first stems head	65-75%

2. Moisture Content. Moisture is essential to the ensiling process: it provides water for lactic acid-forming bacteria and it promotes compaction. On the other hand, excessive free moisture or heat will result in excessive run-off and silo wall pressure. Silage approaches an ideal state when essential moisture is kept high but free or run-off moisture is held to a minimum.

Since moisture and lactic-acid forming bacteria work together in the ensiling process, Nutri-Sil can help you approach the right moisture level by improving moisture tolerance...reducing heat and run-off.

Many operators use the "squeeze test" to determine when cut forage has the proper dry matter/moisture balance. This test consists of giving a handful of forage a good squeeze with both hands. Moisture is about right when the resulting ball expands slowly—if it pops open or crumbles, it is too dry for good silage. If it remains a tight ball, it is too moist.

Agrichemical survey to be held in two states

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — For the first time in ten years, an official survey is being made of pesticide usage by farmers in Maryland and Delaware. The survey is a joint effort of the Maryland-Delaware Crop Reporting Service, Maryland State Department of Agriculture, and the Cooperative Extension Services at the University of Maryland and the University of Delaware.

Its importance was explained in a recent briefing by Shirrell L. Knight, faculty Extension entomology assistant at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Knight commented that the survey will help to get a realistic, quantitative handle on how much of each major herbicide, insecticide and other agricultural chemicals is being used nowadays by farmers in two of the Mid-Atlantic states. She noted that similar surveys are also under way in several other states in the Northeast.

The Maryland-Delaware survey will cover pesticide usage on major field crops and tobacco. Survey questionnaires were mailed during the first week of September to approximately 1,600 crop farmers in Maryland and about 250 in Delaware. Names were selected at random from statewide samples.

Knight urges all recipients to return the completed questionnaires promptly so that tabulations can begin in October. Final published reports for the two states are expected to be ready for limited distribution to interested parties by January 1980.

Accurate and current information on pesticide usage is important to farmers, farm organizations, government and the general public, Knight said. Data collected in the survey will help Extension specialists and other agricultural leaders represent the needs and concerns of farmers more adequately before federal agencies which may be reviewing specific chemicals under the Rebuttable Presumption [illegible] Registration program.

This is the process of scrutinizing specific pesticides as they come up for registration by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Such registration is necessary to permit public use of a chemical.

Some of the agrichemicals included in the Maryland-Delaware pesticide survey questionnaire are already targeted to be taken off the market, and others are scheduled for exhaustive study to prove their merits from an environmental standpoint.

This survey will deal with generic names, rather than trade names, Knight emphasized. It is not an attempt to compare the popularity of agrichemicals manufactured by commercial firms.

Individual questionnaires will be kept confidential, and they will be used only for compiling county and state totals. Sales figures from commercial firms are not being utilized, since they are not considered reliable, or suitable, for purposes of the survey.

The Maryland-Delaware agrichemical usage study is being funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture in connection with the National Agricultural Pesticide Impact Program.

The Guernsey 4-H senior and grand ribbons at this week's District 4-H dairy show were won by Tina Ritter, whose cow is shown here with Cindy Ritter. Darryl Rohrbaugh took the reserve senior and grand placings. For more information about the show, see the articles in this week's paper.

Generators lacking in surge capacity can collapse in voltage! Without starting the load!! With balance design you get peak starting capability per engine H.P....So, whether you need a 1 H.P. per KW surge to start a stone crusher motor or a tough "soft start" generator to start off a multiple motor poultry house, we can tailor your Engine-Generator set to fit your need. Balanced design adds up to the most motor starting capability per dollar invested.

Quality day care is a major decision

NEWARK, Del. Many men today are joining the work force to help boost family income or to fulfill personal needs. When a mother decides to seek outside employment, quality childcare is always a major consideration.

Many women, strapped by economic or time constraints, have no choice when it comes to making childcare arrangements. But wherever options exist, parents should consider several important factors, according to Walker.

Some childcare facilities offer only a babysitting service. This should not be the case, according to the family living agent. A good facility should provide a safe, clean atmosphere that allows the child to move about freely without risk of injury. It should also provide learning experiences to encourage physical, mental, social and emotional growth. There should be time for free play, but there should also be time allotted for instructed play to increase your child's skills.

The childcare facility should provide adequate rest and proper nutrition. This might include both a well-balanced breakfast and lunch to take your child through the day.

A good preschool also encourages feedback from parents. Parents should be encouraged to involve themselves in their child's learning process.

Your child's caretakers should be able to understand children's problems and to cope with them properly. They must be patient individuals who understand the characteristics of children at various ages and know how to work with them. They must also be able to set understandable rules and to enforce them firmly, yet kindly and fairly.

The preschool must also be licensed and uphold state health regulations, including regulations pertaining to immunization of children and the maximum number of children that can be cared for safely.

Lehigh profits up

at consumers in Philadelphia and the Delaware Valley, northern New Jersey, Lebanon Valley and the Wyoming Valley.

Along with the new program will come a new look in the coop's packages. Gone will be the familiar orange and purple "LeHi" logo. In its place will be a green and orange sunrise scene and a new logo "Lehigh Valley Farms".

The new look, Barry said, was designed to be warmer, more appealing and less slick than the old.

Lehigh ads will run in newspapers, TV and, in some markets radio, Barry said. "We are making a sizable commitment to advertising," Barry said. "But it will absolutely, without question, help profits. We must remember that we're not really in the dairy business, we're in the food business. And like other successful food companies, we must let consumers know why they should buy our products."

In planning their advertising strategy, Barry and other coop officials had hoped one source of funds would be the checkoff money now paid by Lehigh members into the Federal Order 4 marketing program. The checkoff amounts to 7-cents on every hundredweight shipped by any dairyman. It will soon increase to 12-cents.

The funds are deducted and paid automatically into the Order 4 program. However, those funds could be diverted into the Lehigh program, Barry pointed out, for any member who requests it.

Those requests must be addressed to the Order 4 administrator. So far, about one in four Lehigh members have diverted their checkoff dollars from Order 4 to the coop advertising campaign. Barry had been hoping half the members would request the switch. If all 700 member switched, it would mean the advertising pot would be sweetened by some $20,000 monthly.

Barry said the Order 4 advertising effort is aimed at boosting milk consumption. "All we want to do is to continue to tell people to drink milk. But we want to tell them to drink Lehigh milk."

With the coop now on a sound financial footing, Barry said at a press conference after the formal meeting, Lehigh leadership can begin working on other problems. Membership, for example.

"We have a cheese plant that's running at only 70-percent capacity," he said. "If we had more members we could run closer to full capacity. To keep this entire operation going efficiently, we need the milk from 1,200 farmers. Right now we have 700 members, but we're launching a membership drive to get more."

Barry also expressed concern about what he feels is a wasteful competition between cooperatives, and urged that coops work more closely together for the benefit of both farmers and consumers.

EXPANDED METAL HAS MANY ADVANTAGES OVER OTHER FLOORING SYSTEMS. FOR EXAMPLE:

■ Foot problems are reduced, compared with solid concrete or concrete slat flooring.
■ Expanded metal "self-cleans" and stays dry better than any other flooring we've evaluated. As a result, bacteria buildup is minimized, which improves conception rates and overall herd health.
■ Boars and sows have better footing during breeding, compared with breeding on grooved concrete floors.

Red Power Showdown draws record crowd

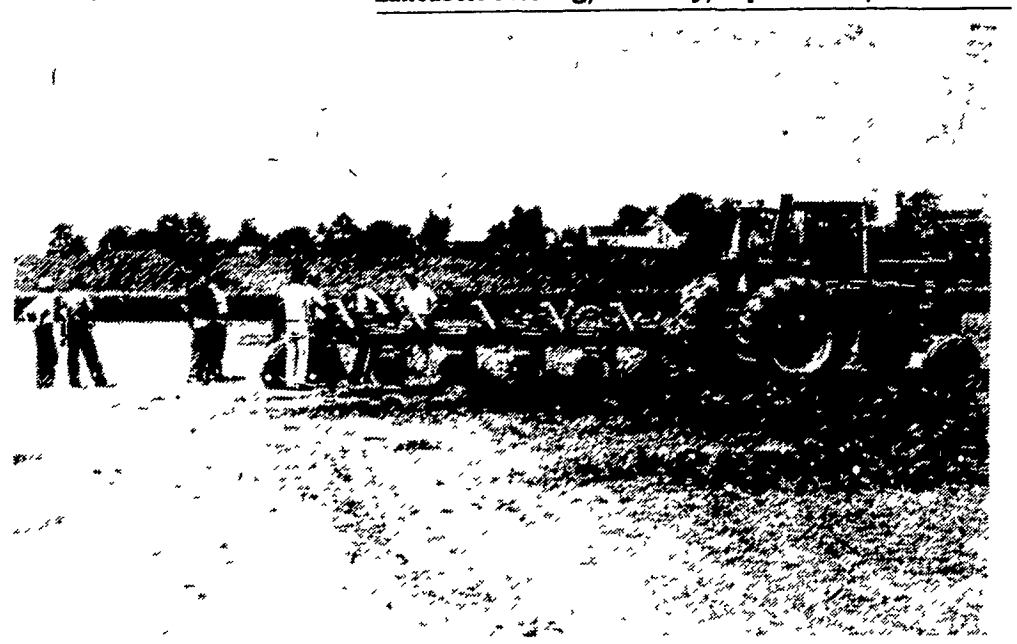
MANHEIM - The second annual Red Power Showdown was held at Noah W. Kreider and Sons Farm near Manheim on Thursday. This field demo day was sponsored by the five international Harvester dealers of the county.

Del Reynolds, area sales manager for the company, estimated that a record 1,000 people participated in the day's activities.

The main feature of the demo day was the demonstration of the all new International 2+2. This 150 horsepower International was used with an 830 forage harvester and a large chisel plow in the demo day. Some of the additional equipment that was featured included a 584 four wheel drive tractor, a 595 manure spreader, a 1460 combine, an 886 tractor, and 484 utility tractors.

For those who attended the Red Power Showdown, there was an opportunity to hear of the features of the equipment as well as a chance to test drive the tractors. A driving range was included in the Kreider's 70 acre field, which featured the demonstration of numerous other tractors.

The five dealers that sponsored the Red Power Showdown were Cope And Weaver Co. of New Providence; Messick Farm Equipment of Elizabethtown; C.B. Hoober and Son of Intercourse; R.S. Hollinger and Son of Mountville; and Heritage International, Inc. of Ephrata.



Farmers had an opportunity to test drive the International tractors and inspect equipment during the demo day sponsored by the Lancaster County International Harvester dealers.

Crop insurance program to be expanded

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The House Agriculture Committee has approved a bill (H.R. 4119), authorizing an expanded crop insurance program for farmers beginning with the 1981 crop year. Similar legislation has been approved by the Senate Agriculture Committee.

The expanded insurance system would allow farmers to insure crops for either 50, 65 or 75 percent of normal yield, but premium subsidies would not apply above the 65 percent level. Farmer use of the expanded insurance system would be encouraged by the federal government paying 30 percent of each participating farmer's premium cost. Additional premium subsidies would be authorized for small farms. States would also be allowd to contribute to premium subsidies.

The new legislation will replace the present limited insurance program and the disaster aid program. The expanded crop insurance program for farmers would begin with the 1981 crop year.

The disaster relief program would continue through the 1981 crop year for those counties where the new insurance program is not available. In counties where the new insurance program is generally available to grain, cotton and rice producers prior to the planting of 1981 crops, disaster payments for the individual crop or crops would be eliminated that year. However, the Secretary of Agriculture would have the authority to continue the disaster relief programs if he determines that on a national or county basis the protection offered by insurance is not adequate. The Secretary can also retain the disaster programs if he determines that retention of the payments is needed to achieve compliance with any 1981 acreage set-aside or land diversion program.

Private insurance companies will be authorized to participate in delivering crop insurance on a commission basis and through reinsurance.

A feature at the Red Power Showdown was the 3588 International, known as the 2+2. It is shown here with the 830 forage harvester, harvesting corn on the Noah Kreider farm.

New planter design has accurate performance

GLENVIEW, Ill. - An all-new air planter from White Farm Equipment is designed for rapid field speeds and extreme accuracy to meet the demanding requirements of top farmers. The new planter also features a monitering system, large capacity hoppers, and mainframe strength to keep farmers running at peak performance during the critical planting season.

According to White Farm Equipment, the new "Seed Boss" air planter is designed to operate with excellent accuracy at increased field speeds.

"Natural fall" seed path accuracy, gauge wheels which conquer obstacles, and "constant force" press wheel design are among other all-new features of the four-, six, and eight-row Seed Boss.

White engineers have designed an all-new metering unit to assure in-row spacing accuracy and reliability. The new system utilizes the force of gravity and air pressure, eliminating mechanical fingers, fluted seed cups and high speed pneumatic hoses or plates, as required by other designs.

The planter allows seed to fall naturally from hopper to metering disc to discharge chute. Seed can move into the ground with a minimum of bouncing, ricochet, and other abuse which can cause erratic spacing. Such gentle handling assures that a maximum number of seeds go into the ground in ready-to-germinate condition.

Air supply on six- and eight-row versions is developed by a simple, efficient, hydraulically driven central blower (optional on four-row). A pump/reservoir on the Seed Boss easily connects to the PTO. White engineers note the drive is nearly silent and requires only about two horsepower to operate.

The monitoring system on the new planter is easy to read and designed to cut down time. The White Farm SMI monitor is standard on every "Seed Boss." A light flashes on the monitor, row by row, as each seed passes a photocell in the seed chute. A horn and light activate immediately upon malfunction. Operators need not worry about hopper levels, because the monitor will note "failure to feed" instantly.

In White's design, gauge wheels carry the weight of the planter plus some frame weight, and they utilize this weight to gauge and firm the soil, remaining in contact with the soil despite terrain irregularity.

An advantage of White's compensating system is that the linkage always divides the downward firming pressure into two equal forces on each side of the row. This is particularly important in rough, minimum tilled soils.

The press wheels operate on a "constant force" principle, despite terrain irregularities. When a wheel presses against the soil, the rubber tire gathers loose dirt around the furrow, then pinches the sides of the furrow closed. The "pinch" is at the sides of the trench, with the soil on the top left loose for unobstructed germination and growth. Pressure is row-adjustable from 10-80 pounds.

Surrounding the planter row units is a new frame/transport design which makes the planter effective in the field and easy to maneuver, transport and store.

The planters' tubular steel toolbar mainframe is seven inches square for frame rigidity and has large clamping areas for row units and chemical hoppers and tanks An enlongated drawbar design minimizes side to side motion, and rugged, fully automatic, hydraulically activated markers is standard equipment.

To go from field to field, the four- and six-row versions transport in operating position. The eight-row unit hydraulically folds from the operator's platform.

Predictions for record fertilizer sales

ST. LOUIS, Mo. - A fertilizer industry spokesman said that members of his industry have "grossly underestimated" the ability of America's farmers to operate in adversity during the past and ,he predicted that next season would be a record-high year for fertilizer sales.

President of The Fertilizer Institute, Edwin M. Wheeler, in remarks before the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA) Fertilizer Conference and TFI Trade Fair, said producers and dealers should recognize that farmers have made substantial investments in land and machinery and they "are going to get that crop in," regardless of weather or a shortened planting season.

"This means, then," Wheeler said, "that the fertilizer dealers must do a better job in planning for inventories that can handle a short season.

"We in the industry, and particularly in the retail level, are simply not expanding our local storage capacity commensurate with the steady, certain growth of the market," he said.

Wheeler told the national gathering of fertilizer and equipment dealers that the fertilizer outlook for 1980 is, "somewhere between good and tremendous" -- forecasting the best tonnage-year in the industry's history -- 53 million tons.

The reasons for his optimism, he said, were that ter net income than they have in several years and that they are showing confidence by buying more equipment and contacting dealers at an early date. Beyond this, Wheeler said that abandonment of a government set-aside program will bring poorer, less fertile land back into production, requiring comparatively large amounts of fertilizer for best crop fields.

He cautioned dealers to remember that farm operating costs have risen dramatically and retailers should fully discuss their credit policies with farmers. With farmers looking for possible ways to cut costs, dealers should work closely with them to assure that fertilizer application is not reduced, thus reducing yield potential, he warned.

The Fertilizer Institute is the industry's Washington-based association, representing fertilizer producers, manufacturers, equipment manufacturers and retailers in all areas of industry concerned.

Farm lenders visit Berks Co. family farm

KEMPTON — Farm lenders from Southeastern Pennsylvania and the New Jersey area gathered at the dairy farm of Donald Meyers, Kempton R2, on Thursday, to learn first hand how that farmer runs his farm.

The meeting, sponsored by Penn-Jersey Harvestore Systems, New Holland, was hosted by Meyers in the effort to show some of the people involved in lending money to farmers just where their money goes and how it is used.

Guidelines for selecting cattle fence

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio - Selecting the right type of fence for containing your cattle is an important decision and one that needs careful consideration for best long-term economy.

Fencing is a capital investment and should be given that consideration. Using good materials can pay real dividends in the long run. One-third or more of the cost of fencing is in the installation cost, and that installation cost is the same whether you use cheap materials or the best available, according to Armco Inc. experts.

A high and sturdy fence is required for proper cattle containment. At least one barbed wire is necessary at the top of the fence to discourage fence-riding. Additional strands of barbed wire can be used if desired. If you have show cattle or horses which might be less valuable if injured by barbs, you will want to use two-strand twisted barbless wire instead.

The Armco fence experts suggest a woven field fence for the bottom portion of the fence. It has 6-inch even spacing top to bottom with 9 inches between the vertical stay wires and gives a strong, durable fence. A barbed or barbless wire on top will give the fence a height from 48-54 inches. This should be sufficient height to contain your cattle.

If your fence will also be used to contain hogs in areas such as corrals, feedlots and pens, panel corral fence for the bottom portion is suggested. The smaller grids at the bottom will provide proper containment for the hogs.

Electric fences provide good temporary control of cattle and horses. For cattle, set a single wire one-half to two-thirds the height of an average animal's back—about 30 inches in most cases.

Armco's line of A to Z fencing products for cattle are available through dealers in most farming areas of the United States.

cheon, the group travelled to the barn, where Meyers told of how he bought the 200 acre farm 14 years ago, mentioning many of the changes and improvements that he has since done.

He raises 100 acres of alfalfa, which is made into haylage, and 85 acres of corn, of which about 20 acres is used for silage, and the remaining crop is utilized for high moisture corn.

He told his audience that he feeds shelled corn year round, and during the Summer his Registered Holsteins are fed all the haylage they can eat in bunks outside. During Winter, he added, it's necessary to feed the haylage inside.

He milks about 60 cows, and has 45 heifers.

Meyers elaborated on his system of farming, telling how he uses his own crops for feeds, only buying supplemental protein. His farm involves the use of three Harvestore systems, and his most recent improvement on the place, is a Slurrystore to store liquid manure.

He told that all the manure from his barns comes to one point in his liquid system, and there it is pumped into his 300,000 gallon Slurrystore. He noted that the tank holds his manure from November through March or April, and has solved the problem of his neighbors complaining about manure on the road, which sometimes was a problem.

Relating facts and figures to his audience as he demonstrated how he worked his one-man operation, Meyers noted that his is truly a family farm, with his wife, Vernette, and three children, Stacey, Melissa, 8, and Brooke, 3, a part of the working team.

Guests at the farm th returned to the front ya where they heard Dr. T Fisher, from the Univers of New Hampshire speak the future of agri-busine For more on his speech, s the related article in ne week's paper.

trouble. Iron oxidizes and becomes largely insoluble, ferric form, in the presence of oxidizing agents such as air or chlorine bleach. Small, reddish-orange particles form and may remain in suspension for long periods. They give the water a rusty color. The particles attach themselves to clothes, dinnerware and other surfaces leaving them yellow or rusty in color.

In order to prevent iron from appearing in the home water supply, it may be necessary to install equipment as a permanent solution. Iron can be removed or controlled by means of an iron precipitation and filtration unit in the water system; a "feeder" which supplies polyphosphates to keep the iron dissolved; an ion exchange unit or a filtration system installed in the plumbing. The equipment used will vary depending upon the amount and form of iron present, the hardness and the acidity of the water.

Warehouse receipts like money in the bank

NEW YORK, N.Y.—erican farmers in the ly 1900's faced greater s than they do today in rketing their products. en if their crops survived plagues of insects, disease, and bad weather, there still was no guarantee that the commodities would make it safely to market.

One of the problems was an American agricultural warehousing system that often was slipshod. Instead of selling at harvest, farmers sometimes put such crops as grain into storage warehouses hoping for a better price later on. But, when they went to claim their commodity, they too often found it had rotted or was missing.

The warehouse receipts issued for commodities sometimes amounted to meaningless pieces of paper.

Then, in 1916, Congress passed the U.S. Warehouse Act. Since then, the people in the U.S. Department of Agriculture who administer it, with cooperation from the warehouse industry, have helped bring about a sound warehousing system.

In essence, the U.S. Warehouse Act promotes sound and uniform warehouse practices and provides warehouse receipts with national acceptability in banking and commerce.

Yet the program and the all-important federal warehouse receipt supply a solid foundation upon which producers, warehouse operators, and financial people can do business. Participation by warehouse operators is strictly voluntary.

The Warehouse Division of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service licenses about 40 per cent of the nation's commercial grain storage capacity. Warehouse operators who want to have their facilities examined may apply for a license. Warehouses covered are those that store not only grains, but also cotton, peanuts, honey, dry edible beans and wool.

Financially, a significant event occurs every time federally licensed warehouse operators issue receipts to farmers for their commodities—or to themselves for commodities they own. The farmers and warehouse operators then can use the receipts as loan collateral and sell them to a commodity merchant.

Also, farmers can pledge receipts for price support loans. Federal receipts are used to fulfill futures contracts on all major exchanges such as New York, Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City. Another advantage is that a federal receipt issued—say, by a warehouse in Georgia—is acceptable as loan collateral by a bank in Nebraska.

The federal receipt says that the commodity is, in fact, stored safely.

"Bankers and insurance people have confidence in the federal receipt," said officer-in-charge George W. Harrison of the Warehouse Division's field office in Memphis, Tenn. "We often receive calls from financial people asking if a warehouse is federally licensed."

Operating requirements for a license are designed to protect depositors without being burdensome to the operator. Once federally licensed, a warehouse operator is subject to the laws and regulations of the Act.

The thoroughness of twice yearly warehouse examinations performed by federal examiners strengthens the credibility of federal warehouse receipts. "The examinations help us with our operation because the examiners measure the commodities in storage with expertise," said Donald Brioulette, president of Demeter, Inc., Indianapolis, Ind., an operation with a 10-million-bushel grain storage capacity. He further advised that the examinations assisted him and his managers by discovering potential problems which, if overlooked, could develop into serious situations.

Federal examiners must understand the principles of different storage methods, grading standards and grading procedures, recordkeeping and accounting procedures, to mention just a few of the many areas of expertise used during a storage facility examination. An examiner must recognize threats to stored commodities such as mold, insects or excessive moisture.

"For anyone doing business on a large scale the federal receipt is vitally important. It is a merchantable item," said Brioulette.

Jerry Rees, executive vice president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, advised farmers to know with whom they are dealing. "Some farmers have lost grain because they didn't have a proper receipt," said Rees. He added, "The warehouse receipt system is essential and a federal receipt is an indicator of a sound warehousing operation."

Donald Schneider, vice president of the commercial banking division of the U.S. National Bank in Omaha, Neb., said a receipt may at times mean even more to a banker than a producer.

"It is a sign of liquidity and not just a piece of paper," said Schneider. "We prefer the federal receipt because we feel the monitoring is better. It's like going first class."

Methods to stretch farm fuel supplies

DES MOINES, Iowa - High prices and tight supplies were the farm fuel facts of life last spring. Since there's no telling what tomorrow's fuel picture might be, you're probably eager to conserve fuel and hold down expenses.

To help you accomplish these objectives, here is a simple and handy ten-point fuel-saving plan for farm tractors:

1. Remember that it is the engine which consumes the fuel. So, maintain the engine in top condition at all times.

2. Keep air filters clean. Only a clean air filter will guarantee that the air/fuel mixture is burned in the right proportion to provide maximum efficiency and economy. Watch for excessive smoke from your tractor exhaust—this could be a sign of a dirty filter.

3. With a diesel engine, make sure injectors and injection pumps are kept in perfect working order. If you have any doubts about their condition, contact your local dealer.

4. Take extra precautions to store and handle fuel so that it stays clean. Dirty fuel causes blockages and waste.

5. Select the gear that gives you the desired travel speed at the most economical engine speed. This means operating the engine at as near as possible to rated engine speed.

6. Minimize wheelslip by correct use of tractor weights and hydraulics on mounted and semi-mounted implements to gain maximum weight transfer.

7. Regularly check and maintain correct tire pressure. Incorrect pressures waste fuel.

8. Don't let "dragging" brakes rob you of fuel. Make the necessary adjustments. And don't let the engine idle unnecessarily.

9. Match implement size to tractor power. Too small an implement means extra, unnecessary trips over the field. And if a piece of equipment is too large and overloading the tractor, you may have to gear way down and increase wheelslip.

10. Take measures to ensure that all implements pull as easily as possible.

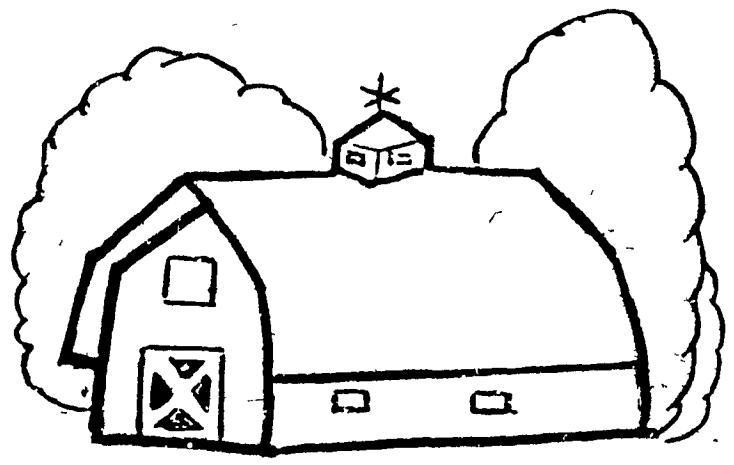
It's A Great Year! Lots Of Hay



Your hay barn or haylage storage is full and you are faced with the unpleasant task of baling another good cutting—

FORGET IT!

Try The HARVESTORE® System!

We Can Build For You NOW! - Don't Wait Until Next Year

Handling those bulky, heavy bales on a hot summer day is about the most unpleasant job you can think of—and it doesn't stop when the hay's in the barn, for you can look forward to a winter spent dragging it back out for daily feedings. Discouraging, too, is the waste that goes along with baled hay.

When your back's about to break...

You're ready

Ever wonder how a HARVESTORE® System farmer finds the money to pay for his investment? By handling his forage as medium-moisture haylage, he harvests, preserves, and feeds more of what he grows in the field. That means he gets more meat or milk—and more money—from each acre.

Starner hosts a herbicide demonstration day

By DEBRA STRICKLER

LEBANON — Community farmers gathered at the farm of John Starner, Lebanon, on August 28, for an opportunity to learn about Roundup, a new herbicide.

The demonstration was sponsored by the Monsanto Agricultural Products Company, manufacturers of Roundup, in cooperation with Lebanon Agway. The activities included an informative program relating the purpose and affects of Roundup on perennial and annual weeds, as well as the methods of applications. A recirculating sprayer was used to demonstrate the application of the chemical to Starner's field of soybeans, polluted with the Johnsongrass perennial.

Roundup was introduced to the market four years ago as a method of control for the tough weeds that grow above the crops. It's main attribute is that it not only destroys the plant but it destroys the root and the plant will never grow again.

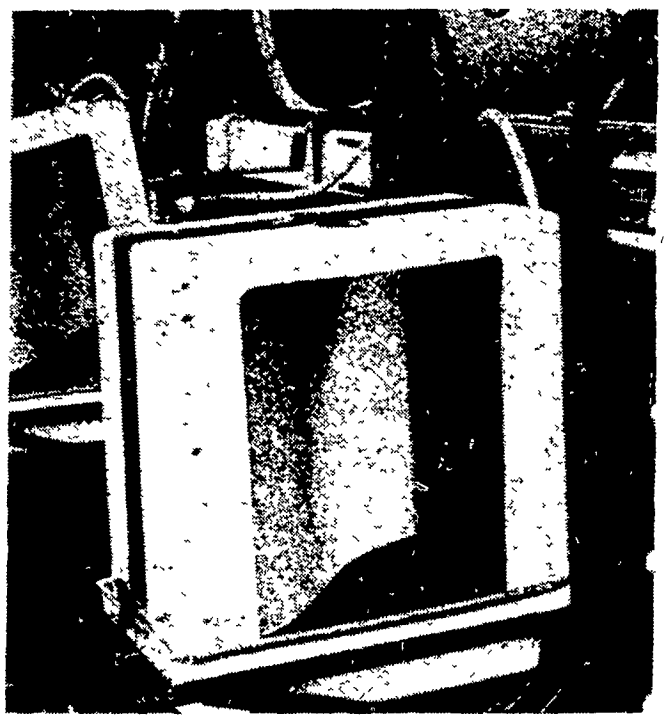
As a non-selective herbicide, Roundup will destroy anything it comes in contact with, including a farmers crop. Therefore it cannot be applied with aerial spray equipment. It needs to be applied selectively to the weeds with a recirculating sprayer which was demonstrated by Chem-Farm, Inc.

The soybean field on the Starner farm was sprayed two weeks prior to the field day. Guy Braxton, regional field representative for Monsanto, admitted the weather conditions were not favorable during the actual day of spraying. There were 20 mile per hour winds. Also, the field should have been sprayed a month earlier since the Johnsongrass had been very tall. The affects of the herbicide was easily seen on the sprayed portion of the field. There was a definite indication that the chemical had begun to affect the root system of the plant.

Since the herbicide is sprayed on the weeds growing above the field crop, it is important to apply the material when the weeds are actively growing and are at least six inches above the crop. The seed heads can not have turned a dark purple or control of weeds will not occur. Roundup destroys the living plant but it can not destroy the seeds to inhibit growth of an additional plant. As smaller weeds grow above the crop, repeated applications may be necessary to gain control of the problem.

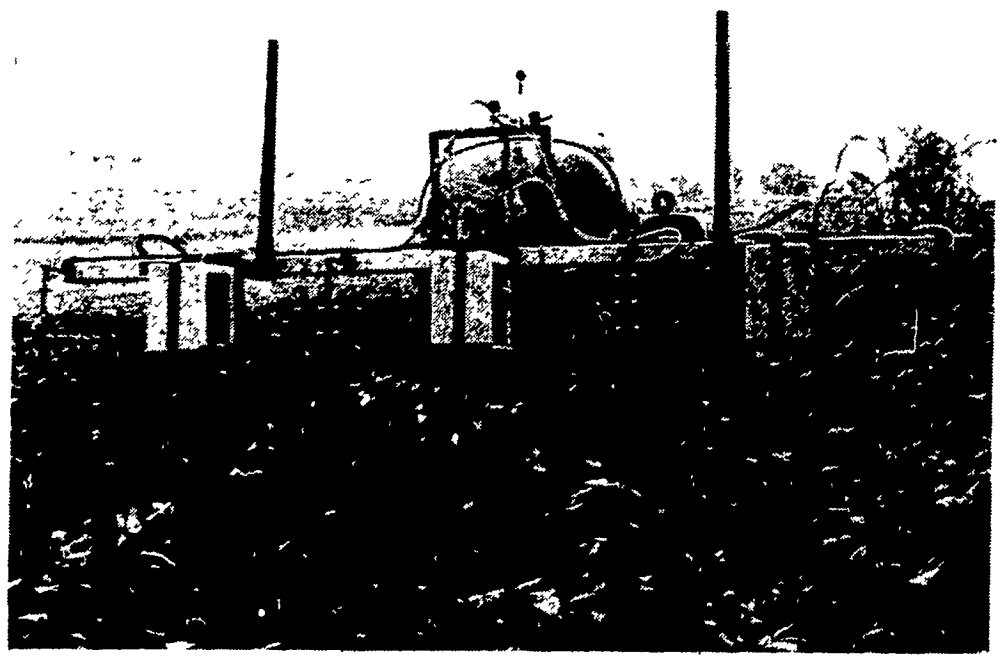
The root system of the plant is destroyed as the chemical enters the plant from the point of foliage and circulates throughout the entire plant, eventually affecting the root. Visible effects on most annual weeds will occur within a

(Turn to Page 43)



The nozzles on the right spray the herbicide above the crop. The herbicide that is not used on the weeds is collected by the "catchpads" and is recycled to be used again. Only the amount of herbicide needed to control the weed is used.

Farmers watch the recirculating sprayer demonstration during the Monsanto field day at the John Starner farm near Lebanon. In the background one can see the dry, wilted Johnson grass that resulted from the Roundup sprayed two weeks earlier.



A six row recycle sprayer is used to apply Roundup to the weeds growing above the soybeans.

few days; on most perennials within a week. The visible effects are a gradual wilting and yellowing of the plant which advances to the complete browning of the above ground growth and deterioration of the underground plant parts.

J. Howard Meredith, president of Meredith Chem Farm Sales, Wye Mills, Md. was present to demonstrate the recirculating sprayer. The sprayer features a 100 gallon aluminized tank which is resistant to all agricultural chemicals. It easily adjusts to any row spacing. In this type of sprayer, the nozzles spray horizontally above the crop and the spray material is returned to the sprayer, hence the chemical recirculates. The use of this herbicide is economical, because only the amount of herbicide needed to control the weed is used. No spray is wasted which will lower a farmers per-acre cost. On the Starner farm, one gallon of herbicide was mixed with 35 gallons of clear water. Five acres were sprayed with only 25 gallons of the liquid.

For more information, one can contact the regional Monsanto representative or the Monsanto Company 204 Bancroft Building, 3411 Silverside Road, Wilmington, Del. 19810.

Farmers redeem grain crops from reserve

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers have redeemed 149.6 million bushels of corn from the farmer-owned reserve in the nine weeks following the June 19 announcement that the trigger price had been reached, Ray Fitzgerald, Executive Vice President of the Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) said.

The following table gives the total amount of each commodity entered into the reserve, the amount redeemed and the percent redeemed to date:

GRAIN	TOTAL ORIG. IN RESERVE	AMT. REDEEMED	% RE-DEEMED
Corn	732 mil. bu.	149.6 mil. bu.	20.4
Barley	41 mil. bu.	5.3 mil. bu.	12.8
Wheat	413 mil. bu.	146.8 mil. bu.	35.5
Oats	39 mil. bu.	7.1 mil. bu.	18.1
Sorghum	44 mil. cwt.	14.5 mil. cwt.	32.8

Barley was released for the second time June 5 and called on June 26. Wheat was released May 16. Oats was released for the second time May 11 and called on June 26 but re-entered reserve status on August 3. Corn was released June 19; sorghum was released June 22; both re-entered reserve status on July 31.

Release of a commodity means farmers may repay their CCC price support loans and redeem or sell the grain without penalty, but are not required to do. Call of a commodity means farmers have 30 days from the date of notification of the call to repay their reserve loans. They are not required to sell the grain, but if they do not repay the loan they must forfeit the grain to CCC, the ASCS official said.

However, the Department has announced that due to current snarls caused by strikes in rail and truck transportation, producers with barley in the reserve will be contacted individually by the Department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service and given the option to delay settlement in 30-day intervals.

Remote door operators provide swine ventilation

AURORA, Ill. - One of the more sophisticated programs for the study of breeding, disease prevention and optimum weight gain to feed ratios is conducted at Washington State University, aided by the designs and hardware of a door manufacturer.

The Swine Center at WSU provides a controlled atmosphere for individual pigs and groups of swine under study at the agricultural college. The main containment area is a combination of outdoor pens linked to an enclosed barn. Passage from the barn to the outdoors are operated manually from outside the barn.

Because all of the space within the barn was needed for the animal enclosures, no access for ventilation was possible without entering the pens.

The doors chosen are the Richards-Wilcox 647 "Fyer-Ward." They are galvanized steel to withstand the pen conditions and rigors of use while weighing only five pounds per square foot.

Because of the limited head and side room, Richards-Wilcox designed and built special hardware and modifications to permit ceiling-mounting of its Model 1265 electric operator. The doors, in sets of six, are fastened at their mid-points onto a single horizontal line shaft. As the chain and sprocket mechanism is activated by remote control, each set of doors pivots open by turning of the line shaft. It's possible to stop them, instantly, at any point up to 80 degrees. Accuracy is controlled by precision limit switches.

Controls on the specially modified one-horsepower operator are on a three button panel for open, close and stop. The doors, while weighty, are efficiently powered and able to be stopped instantly by the operator's built-in magnetic brake.

While the value of the installation to the instructors and students is its remote operation, the units are equipped with an emergency release for manual operation, such as in the case of a power failure.

For information on the installation or similar electric operator configurations (ask for Catalog A-210), contact Richards-Wilcox, One of the White Consolidated Industries, 174 Third Street, Aurora, Il. 60507. Phone (312) 897-6951.

The remote control operator is ceiling mounted which enables space within the barn to be used as animal enclosures.

Meat board head decries burgeoning bureaucracy

BISMARCK, N.D. — Speaking at the Annual Meeting of the National Live Stock and Meat Board in Bismarck, August 20, the Executive Vice President of the National Pork Producers Council said the greatest threat to freedom today is a mushrooming bureaucracy.

Orville K. Sweet, Des Moines, Iowa, said the bureaucracy is aided and abetted by "self-appointed consumer antagonists trained in the tactics of bureaucratic guerilla warfare."

"Enough history has been written," he said, "to convince us that the misdirected consumer movement, if not checked, will coax the producer to produce himself into oblivion and drive the country toward bankruptcy."

He said that while the production of food and fiber is vital to the health and welfare of the country, government is much more sensitive to the demands of consumer antagonists than to the pleas of producers.

"For too long we have thought that we are minding our own business when in actuality someone else was plotting our future," Sweet said.

He suggested the solution to this dilemma may be found in efficient, purposeful producer organizations and in inspired leadership. "Organization," Sweet said, "is the new frontier in commodity group progress."

He said producers can maintain a contact with and have influence on national policy provided they understand organization and the decision making process.

The pork industry executive noted the number of legislative aides in Washington has jumped from 5,500 in 1955 to 23,500 today and that the number is projected to reach 27,500 by 1985.

He noted also that there are now 45,000 trade and professional organizations in the United States and the success of each depends in large part on how efficiently they solve members' problems and how well they let the members know what they are doing.

"Probably the most unique characteristic of civilized man," Sweet stated, "is to organize to accomplish things collectively that he can't accomplish individually; but to do so without the threat of inhibiting freedom of choice and personal rights."

Pretty cow winners named at Maryland Fair

A pair of Harford county sisters teamed up with their senior yearling Holstein heifers, "Molly " and "Kizzy," to capture the senior championship and over-all reserve champion honors in the Pretty Cow contest, held Sunday night (Aug. 26) at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium. The girls are Holly Amos, 19 (left), and Julie Amos, 17 (right), of Street. They and their animals were garbed as a whimsical barbershop quartet singing the praises of milk.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Central Maryland 4-H members edged back into top positions in this year's Pretty Cow contest, held August 26 at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

Lisa Ann Horman, 12, of Frederick repeated her 1978 feat as junior champion. And this year she and her senior yearling Guernsey heifer, "Candy," went on to win grand champion honors. They were decked out as the legendary Paul Bunyon and his big blue ox, "Babe."

A pair of Harford county sisters teamed up with their senior yearling Holstein heifers, "Molly" and "Kizzy," to capture the senior championship and reserve champion honors. The girls were Holly S. and Julie Amos of Street. They and their animals were garbed as "Dairy Delight," a whimsical barbershop quartet singing the praises of milk.

Lisa C. Reinhold, 16, of Centreville (Queen Annes County) was runner-up in the senior division for the second consecutive year with her five-year-old Brown Swiss cow, "Heidi." They were costumed as "Sylvester the Cat" and "Tweety Bird."

Anita C. Baase of Gambrills (Anne Arundel County) placed third in the senior division with her senior year Guernsey heifer, "Brenda."

Two members of the venerable Montgomery County 4-H Jersey Calf Club captured second and third places in the junior Pretty Cow competition. They were Katrina ("Kandy") Weiger of Gaithersburg and Duean Stiles, 13, of Damascus, respectively, with their Jersey heifers, "Boom-Boom" and "Blossom."

Moved ahead from its usual Monday or Tuesday night spot in the Maryland State Fair schedule, the 4-H and FFA Pretty Cow contest drew a disappointing eight entries. This compared with 16 for a Monday night show last year and an all-time high of 27 for a Tuesday night show in 1977.

Contest judges were Dr. Richard F. Davis of College Park (Prince Georges County) and Mary Lou Cox of Pikesville (Baltimore County). Dr. Davis is dairy science department chairman at the University of Maryland, and Miss Cox is merchandise director at Golden Ring Mall for Stewart and Co., a Baltimore area department store chain.

A former Baltimore county 4-H member, she has served 24 years as a temporary executive secretary in the 4-H office at the Timonium fairground during state fair time.

Jr. English 4-H horse show winners named

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — The junior English 4-H horse and pony show went on as scheduled August 26 in the outdoor horse-ring near the new Exhibition Hall at the Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

Top performer in the junior competition was Lisa Horn of Berlin (Worcester County), from Maryland's lower Eastern Shore. She and her pony, "Keep Smilin," won four firsts during the day, including the grand champion mare award for both horses and ponies. Their performance wins came in the junior hunter seat for ponies and junior hunter fence-jumping class.

Stacy Knott of Frederick emerged as the top horse contestant. She and her mount, Abby Mill, won firsts in grooming and showmanship and in the show class for fillies and mares over two years old. They placed third in the junior hunter seat performance class for horses.

Miss Knott used another mount, "Broadway Baby," to place second in the English pleasure command class.

Holly Hubbard of Marriottsville (Baltimore County) and her pony "Master's Touch," won two firsts, including junior champion honors in the show classes for foals and yearlings. They were third in the show class for gelding ponies.

Tonie Bosley of Jarrettsville (Harford County) also won two firsts. Her pony "Rum-N-Coke," was named champion pony gelding and grand champion gelding. Miss Bosley and her mount placed third in two performance classes for ponies and second in the junior hunter seat fence-jumping class. They were third in junior grooming and showmanship.

Holly Ellis of Ilchester (Howard County) had two firsts and a second in junior English performance classes with her horse, "Cinnamon Tart" and "Light n' Lively."

Finally, a pair of U.S. Congressman's daughters from the Eastern Shore also won honors for horsemanship in the junior English classes at the Maryland State Fair. Gene Bauman of Easton (Talbot County) had the reserve champion gelding and placed first and third in two performance classes. Her sister, Vicky Bauman, was second in the junior English pleasure class for large ponies.

Bergland discusses future research goals

SAGINAW, Mich., — Even though U.S. crops are projected near record levels this year, Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland said the "challenge of the 1980's is going to be to get back to basics and replenish agricultural research knowledge."

In a meeting with agricultural leaders here, Bergland said that budgetary restraints demand that research be undertaken on only the highest priority needs.

Those needs, he said, include expanding human nutrition research, learning more about photosynthesis, relieving plant and animal stress to weather extremes, increasing plant and animal productivity, developing alternate energy resources and new conservation techniques, and preserving natural resources.

"We must learn what mechanisms result in some plants making better use of sunlight than others. We must also find out why some plants and animals respond better to stress conditions like heat and drought. We don't have a precise answer.

"Another priority for our research must be to increase the nutritional value of agricltural products for both people and animals. If we can increase this in both plants and animal products, while we develop mechanisms to turn the agricultural productivity curve upward, we will achieve two of our most important research objectives," Bergland said.

"President Carter is very concerned that famers of this nation will be very tempted to go out and plow down good conservation cover, and bulldoze shelter belts and terraces to expand production, because of current good crop prices.

"Researchers must help address the question of how best to help farmers adapt to a changing world in which protection of our natural resources is more vital than ever before," Bergland said.

In the energy area, he said we must begin to analyze the potential effect of sharply higher fuel prices on farming, while developing ways to reduce our consumption of fuels.

"I'm confident that there are ways to economize and that our researchers will develop them. It is absolutely necessary if we are to meet President Carter's goal of reducing our use of imported oil by 2.5 million barrels a day by 1990," Bergland said.

"We are going to give research a sharper focus and take on the tough questions. Only by doing this can we undertake an effective research program to meet our goals for the 1980's," he said.

FOR THE MAN WHO THINKS REALLY BIG
- Turbocharged 674 cu. in. displacement
- 150 gallon fuel tank
- Case 4-way selective steering and power shift
- Make molehills out of mountains. Trying to till on a hillside is tough. Most tractors and implements tend to drift sideways downhill, and you must constantly correct for that drift. With Case crab steering, you just flip a lever in the cab, then edge all four wheels slightly uphill, continuously compensating for the drift.

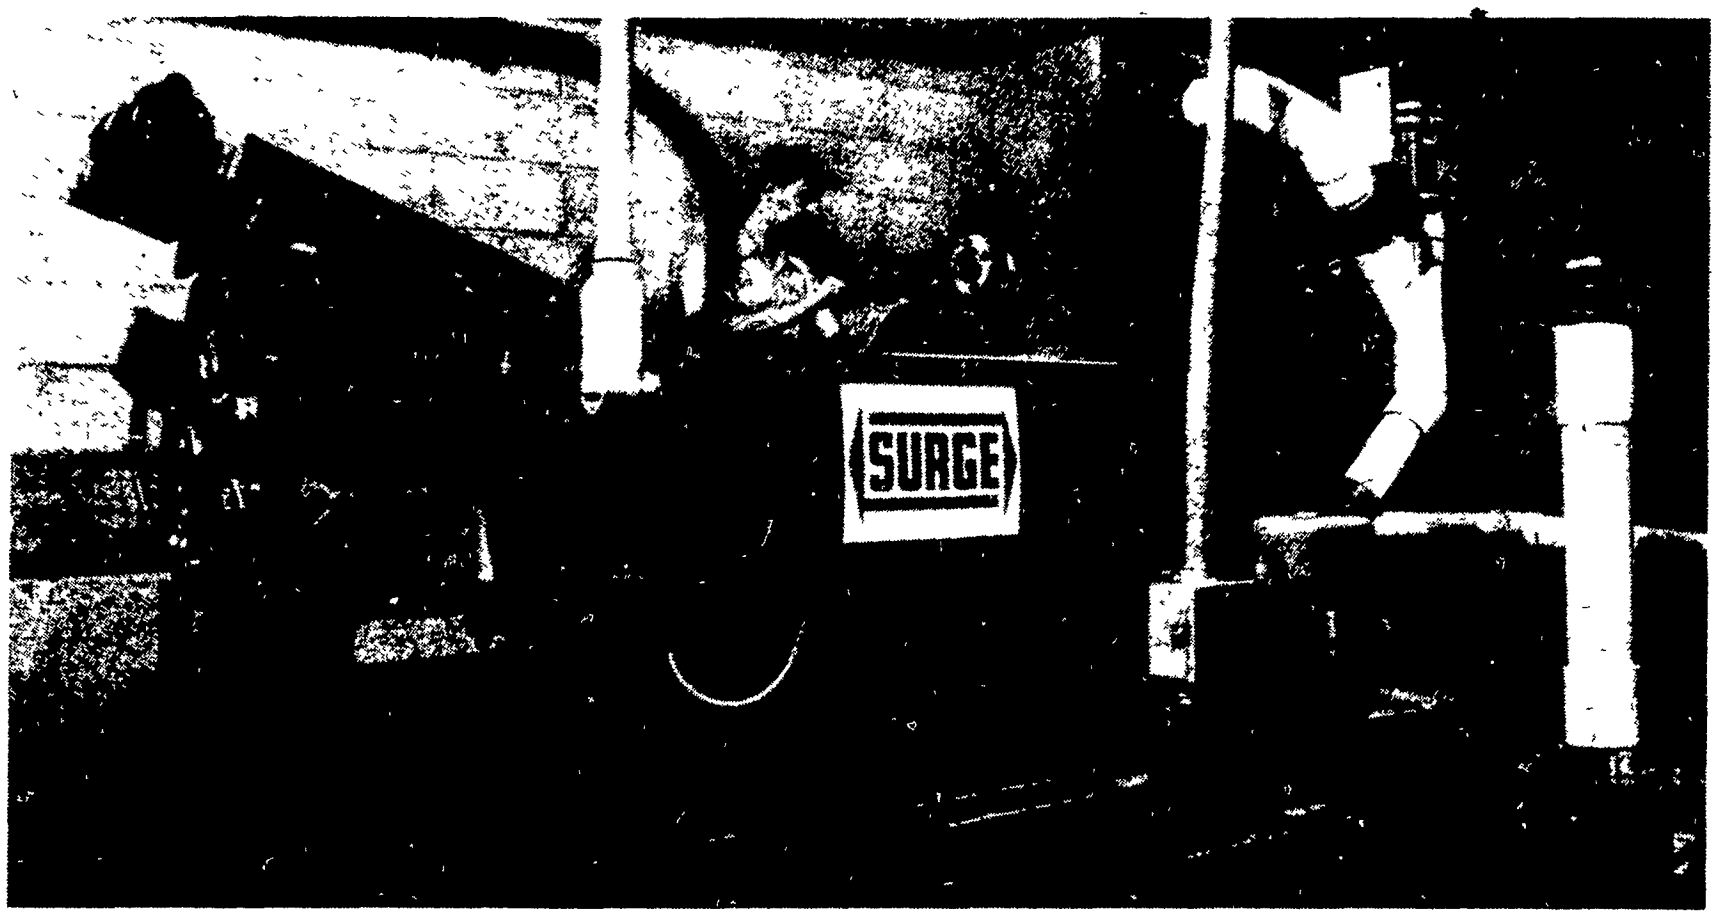
DAIRYMEN!!



There's a new and easy way to handle manure. It can even generate extra income. It's TRU from Surge.

If you're a dairyman, check out the rugged, new TRU manure handling system from Surge.

The TRU converts raw dairy manure into two valuable, easy-to-handle by-products. A high nutrient liquid fertilizer; and a low-moisture, near-odorless solid that can be used as a source of quality bedding or sold as garden mulch.

Incoming manure is agitated in a process pit beneath the TRU. The agitated slurry is then pumped through 4 sets of pressurized rubber rollers and perforated steel drums to separate solids from the liquids. The solid has the consistency of commercial peat moss. The liquid contains approximately 85% of the fertilizer value, and because of its water-like consistency can be easily transferred to a lagoon or field with no further agitation.

With a 100 cow herd, the TRU could easily convert a messy, smelly problem into $5000-$8000 worth of high nutrient fertilizer, plus 36,000-54,000 cu. ft. of quality bedding or saleable soil conditioner per year.

Tina Bucher - actively involved in everything she does

By SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Staff Writer

Tina Bucher, a tall, slender Solanco High School senior has the natural talent, training, and interest in journalism to equip her with the necessary skills to write award winning essays, articles for the school newspaper and even cover meetings and local events for other news publications.

Recently, her essay concerning the operation of the Underground Railroad in Lancaster County was selected the winner for a contest conducted by the Southern Lancaster County Historical Society. Tina spent considerable time researching, writing and documenting the historical accounts of families, the locations of farms and buildings, and the routes by which slaves were temporarily housed and then moved along their search for personal freedom. At least one local newspaper picked up her report and printed it in serial form for several weeks.

Generally, however, Tina's journalistic works have been printed in the Solanco "Quill." In addition to this type of reporting, she has had a year's work at reporting the activities and business which progressed at the Solanco FFA meetings during her junior year as chapter reporter.

She was selected in May to the office of County FFA secretary to record the minutes of the quarterly meetings for the 1979-80 school year.

In her local chapter, however, Tina will be drawing upon some skills other than purely literary. She was elected chapter president in May of this Spring. Throughout the coming school terms she will preside over the monthly, evening chapter meetings and delegate responsibilities to various committees.

This office of presidency has come after the completion of three years of FFA projects and studies.

Tina recalled that when she was a freshmen she was one of five girls among approximately fifty greenhands. To date, she says three of the girls have remained in the FFA program.

As a greenhand, Tina carried a project of a Holstein calf and a project for a pleasure horse. Her parents, James and Ozella Bucher, along with her older brother Jim, have operated a Holstein dairy farm for many years. It was a natural decision for her to choose a Holstein for her first project. It was also natural for her to choose the pleasure horse because she had had some experience with the Lan-Chester Pony Club prior to entering high school.

However, after one year with the pleasure horse project, Tina decided to discontinue it because it required participation in more horse shows than she wished to keep up with. As a sophomore, she carried the same Holstein project and added a Guernsey calf and two acres of corn to her project list.

As a junior, Tina continued with the two dairy animals and the corn project and at the South East Regional FFA dairy show earlier this Summer, August 21, her junior yearling Guernsey placed first in her class, took junior champion honors and was selected Reserve Grand Champion.

Recalling the judge's comments about her animal, Tina said her junior yearling exhibited outstanding size in comparison to the others in her class as well as any would her age.

Lindenhof Flash Div Eulene, Eulene as Tina calls her, was purchased from Dick Linde, a well known Guernsey breeder in the Southern end whose records are state winners.

"Dr. Fredd suggested that I buy one from Dick Linde if I wanted to buy a Guernsey for a project in my sophomore year, so I did," Tina explained.

"Next year I plan to have a dairy herd project which requires three animals as a minimum," Tina added. "By November, I hope my Holstein has a heifer calf. Last year she had a bull!"

Tina helps with the morning milking and washes up after the evening milking in addition to taking care of her project animals. But her real enthusiasm for dairy animals came in the competition of participating on the Solanco Dairy Judging Team. Tina went out for the preliminary training and trial judging as early as her Freshmen year and successfully studied and practiced her way into a position on the dairy team.

Year after year, Tina has kept her position on the team which has traditionally been very selective. After the Farm Show activities have been finished each Winter, the adviser starts with local barn meetings and practices. Later on in the school year, the group takes a tour for a few days to a number of outstanding dairy herds in several surrounding states as well as Pennsylvania for more exposure for the young people to dairy cattle.

In early April the final dairy judging team is selected. Tina said she really enjoys the competition and even giving the oral reasons although she says she feels a bit nervous on the outset.

Between the FFA meetings, the dairy club meetings and her school work which she had to clear away each week, Tina went out for the varsity softball team. "I was not one of the outstanding players by far, but I hope to improve this year!" she quipped.

Tina has been a member of the national honor society at Solanco for three years attesting to her academic qualifications. She sees a future which will probably include a college education, but she is not certain yet what field to study and has consequently not thought much about selecting a college.

"I intend to work for a year before going to college." "I am not ready for college yet," she explained.

"My one real hobby — or the one that I am most interested in — is country music," she confessed emphatically. "I would like to dream that a number of years from now I might be working in the business end of country music." Neglecting to mention that she plays the piano, the guitar and the banjo as well as sing herself, Tina prefers at this point to emphasize others' musical productions.

Although Tina Bucher has no long range plan neatly laid out before her, she has a number of past accomplishments and presently active talents including writing and music and dairy judging. And with the local chapter and county FFA offices for the coming school year, one can be assured that she will not be idly spending her time.

Tina works diligently at her project book, one of the many record books she keeps for projects as well as those she maintains for chapter and county FFA elected positions.

Homestead Notes

Kendy's Kollumn

by Kendace Borry

How I would dread this weekend when I was in school. The official end of Summer was here, and regular school hours would shortly enforce me to give up my easy-going way of life.

When the school bells would ring for the last time in June, how ecstatic I would appear. That long Summer stretched before me, and how I loved the thourght of not having the daily routine of school enforced upon me

But all too quickly June would end and July would be upon me. But still I was smiling because July is a long month, and there was always August to enjoy.

But July always flew by. and when I saw August staring me in the face, I'd start to get the first few flutters of apprehension in my mind. The only redeeming grace of August was that it held my birthday, and even that would have been gladly traded for a few extra days of freedom.

August is a terrible month, it zooms by with the rush of a superjet, and leaves you hanging on the terrible brink of that horrid holiday--Labor Day Weekend--otherwise known as the last days of liberty from school.

While everybody else was happily engrossed in picnic plans and special ideas to celebrate the date, I would mope.

I'd head to my favorite secret spot in the barn, throw myself down on the hay, and silently hate whatever fate so quickly tore away my Summer vacation. It just wasn't fair. Summer was never long enough, and I wasn't ready to go back to school.

But no matter how I fought it, the holiday would end, and there I would be, bright and early, standing at the bus stop, muttering. And the giant yellow transportation to scholarly intentions would come and gobble me up, and I was powerless to prevent it.

But by the middle of October I would finally be reconciled to the the fact that there was only about 150 more school days until the next Summer vacation, and that one, I would assure myself, just had to last longer.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

And now to tell you a bit more about our trip through Kentucky and Virginia. One of the houses which I enjoyed visiting was way out in the country near a place called Crab Orchard, Kentucky.

We probably wouldn't have stopped to see The William Whitley House if I hadn't been driving. But driving, driving wasn't my idea of a vacation—one day we drove 560 miles from Tennessee to our home. Anyway, this was the first brick house built about 1790 that was "west" of the Alleghenies. Kentucky was organized in 1776 as a county of Virginia. At that time raids by northern Indians made life in the "western country" a dangerous adventure. This particular house had a small room in the center of it that contained no windows but had a fireplace and a small stairway to the attic. We were shown an opening in the attic floor where the children could be hidden in an Indian attack.

Col. William Whitley who built the house was a pioneer scout and Indian fighter. At one point he had been given 10,000 acres for winning battles and he traded some of this land in order to build this large brick house. It was the gathering place for frontier leaders such as George Rogers Clark and Daniel Boone. Col. Whitley died in Canada in 1813 and he was still fighting Indians.

Besides seeing the old fort at Harrodsburg, Ken., we also saw the log cabin in which Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks were married June 12, 1806. Abraham Lincoln's parents cabin is now sheltered in a huge brick building. The cabin itself is one small room which appears to be dominated by a hugh rough-hewn bed. There was very little other furniture. In contrast, nearby was a huge mansion built by Major James Taylor in 1830 and which now houses an interesting museum.

To break the monotony of driving, we did take a walking tour of Lexington, Virginia (we had to conduct it ourselves or else wait three hours), and we also stopped at the Strasburg Museum in Virginia. It contained a bit of everything from Indian artifacts and Civil War relics to blacksmith and potter shops.

Burgers can be a supper bonanza

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — "Come one, come all, get your burgers here!" That could be the barker's call at the midway, or it might be the voice of the chef at your own backyard grill.

But getting the burgers is just a beginning. You can supply a parade of toppers which make the hamburgers a real bonanaza. Favorite ingredients can get into the act here with Butter-Blue cheese topping for some, a Cheese-Relish Spread for others. Some might like a combination chili sauce and Cheddar cheese while still others would prefer a sour cream base accented with shredded Brick cheese and pimiento-stuffed olives.

And that's not all, folks! For the French fry fans, there's a special Dunkin' Dip made of a spicy combo of sour cream and chili sauce.

BURGER BONANZA

1½ pounds ground beef
½ cup dry bread crumbs
½ cup milk
¼ cup chopped onions
1½ teaspoons salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
8 hamburger buns
Butter-Blue Cheese Spread
Cheese-Relish Spread
Chili-Cheese Spread
Cheese-Olive Spread

Combine meat, crumbs, milk and seasonings; mix lightly. Shape into 8 patties. Broil or grill to desired doneness. Spread buns, as desired, with:

BUTTER-BLUE CHEESE SPREAD

Combine softened butter, Blue cheese and Worcestershire sauce; mix until well blended. Approx. ¾ cup.

CHEESE-RELISH SPREAD

1 tablespoon prepared mustard

Combine softened cream cheese, pickle relish and mustard; mix until well blended. Approx. 1 cup.

DUNKIN' DIP

1½ cups dairy sour cream
½ cup chili sauce
1 (2 pound) package frozen French fries

Combine sour cream and chili sauce; chill. Serve with French fries, prepared according to package directions. 2 cups.

CHEESE-OLIVE SPREAD

WE MAKE WORMING PAY!

And Beacon does it two ways!

Beacon is finally ending all the controversy about worming. It pays, and we can prove it!

One way is with new BEACON PRE-FRESH, our worming conditioning feed with TBZ* A one-time, 5-pound feeding treatment just before cows freshen effectively controls all major species of worms with no setbacks or side-effects

Another way is with new BEACON PARA-CIDE, our feed supplement designed for use as a top-dress It allows you to treat your entire herd at the same time, which means worm reinfection is less likely. Its effective ingredient is coumaphos, a highly successful worming formula. And milk does not have to be withdrawn from the market during or following treatment.

Both PRE-FRESH and PARA-CIDE are highly palatable because they use Beacon's selection of special feed ingredients What's more, they will increase your milk production and profits

See your Beacon dealer now He'll give you the latest news on how we make worming pay

Two on two tractors can do the work of one

By JERRY WEBB

NEWARK, Del. — In this day of big farm equipment and ever-increasing efficiency of production, it's refreshing to find someone with a little different theory Such a guy is William Parker, of Burrsville, Delaware, who doesn't believe that bigger is always better or that one man with a big tractor can do the work of two men with smaller rigs.

Farmers, who traditionally tilled fairly large plots with old-fashioned 2-wheel drive tractors, have been finding them inadequate. They feel a need for a larger tractor with more horsepower to cover more ground quicker. But Parker has a different point of view. He thinks two people, using two smaller machines, make more sense. So instead of investing 50 or 60 thousand dollars in one of those mammoth 4-wheel drive models, he sticks with much less expensive used International 1456's.

Parker buys these "outdated rigs" on the used market for a fraction of their new price, and using his mechanical expertise puts them in top running order. Then when it's time to do field work he sends two identical rigs to the field. One with a skilled operator who knows all about the job to be done and the other a less experienced and less costly driver who can follow instructions and operate his machine safely. Parker thinks those two people, using the smaller equipment, can get the job done better and at a lower cost than one highly trained and highly paid operator using a super expensive 4-wheel drive tractor.

It's an interesting thought and one that would have to be explored by each individual farmer. Is it better to pay for a little extra labor when it's needed and keep two smaller rigs in operating condition than it is to make that big investment in one brand new model that is ready to go when the time comes?

Some farmers tell me they buy the big equipment to cut down their tax bill. In other words, if they don't spend it for machinery, Uncle Sam gets it. So why not have the biggest and the best? But a lot of farmers aren't in that kind of tax trouble. They're struggling just to make ends meet so why would they buy big equipment?

In the golden days of Farmall H's and M's I spent a few summers as a sharecropper's assistant driving a Farmall H. As a teen-aged farmhand, I got 35 cents an hour following along behind the man who owned the equipment. "Snort'n Horton," as we called him, set the pace. He decided when we went to the field and what we would do and usually he took the lead. So all I had to do was keep a tractor in the field and keep from hurting something. My pay reflected the level of my assignment.

I don't think farming has changed that much. I know it's gotten bigger and it's spread out and it involves a lot of farms and it must be done in a hurry. But that was also true 30 years ago. "Snort'n Horton" farmed sharecropped acres all over the county. It wasn't at all unusual to spend an hour driving a tractor to the field — an hour that I was never paid for since my pay coincided only with my field work. That old boy knew that I would rather drive a tractor than do almost anything else, and so he considered the trip to and from the field my responsibility. If I happened to catch a ride on one of his tractors, that was to my benefit and therefore didn't require any payment. I was glad to have the work and he knew it and the problem of transportation never came up for discussion.

"Snort'n Horton" was a smart old dude. He knew how to keep two tractors in the field at a very low cost. He made all the decisions and I just followed along. How much more profitable that must have been than investing in the larger Super M Farmall, the ultimate tractor of the time.

Bringing that example up to today's standards, Parker thinks two 1456's can do the work of one of the 4-wheel drive models. So why make the investment? For not only does that mean a new tractor, it also means new tillage equipment, and that adds up to $100,000 rather quickly. And you can pay a lot of farmhands with the interest on that sort of an investment.

A lot of farmers have neither the interest or the know-how to keep older equipment serviceable. For them the new models of whatever size are probably the best bet, but to the guy with a little mechanical savvy and the desire to make some money, the older machines provide an attractive alternative. I'm reminded of that when I see the old Farmall H's and M's still working, some of them looking as good as they did in the late 1940's when they were purchased new.

"Snort'n Horton" has gone to his final resting place and I'm gradually wearing out and slowing down, but you can bet those old Farmall H's are still working somewhere on somebody's farm. And somewhere there's a 15-year-old kid who would work almost for nothing just to have the chance to drive one.

Want the best of urban and rural

Pennsylvanians moving to smaller communities

UNIVERSITY PARK-For the first time in this century, large numbers of people are leaving metropolitan areas for small-size communities, according to Dr. Gordon F. De Jong and Kenneth G. Keppel of The Pennsylvania State University.

The desire to live in a small city, a village, or the countryside is typical of Pennsylvania Migrants, the two sociologists report from a recent survey.

RECENT SURVEY.

Although 75 per cent of the people surveyed preferred to live in a generally rural setting, only 18 per cent wanted these places to be more than 30 miles from a large city.

"What emerges is a preference for the best of both rural and urban living—a home in the countryside that is within a metropolitan region," Dr. De Jong affirmed.

The largest pattern of continuous out-migration occurred between 1960 and 1975 in 28 Pennsylvania counties, including most of the state's major metropolitan areas, as shown in U.S. Census data.

The findings were reported recently in Bulletin 825, "Urban Migrants to the Countryside," published by the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State. Dr. De Jong and Mr. Keppel are associate director and research associate, respectively, with the Population Issues Research Center at Penn State.

Tracing the movements of people in the survey over a 3-year period, De Jong and Keppel found that only about 5 per cent of all central city and suburban residents who expressed a preference for small-size communities actually migrated to such locations. Many more people prefer small-size places than actually move there, it was pointed out.

Families moving from urban to nonurban areas considered housing and neighborhood characteristics most important in their migration decisions. Neighborhood factors were listed most frequently by household members as reasons for moving. Employment and housing reasons were mentioned less frequently.

Households moving from urbanized to more rural areas were mostly married couples with children. The heads of these households were generally better educated, more likely to be in white collar occupations, and had higher incomes than household heads moving from rural to urbanized areas, the findings showed.

"Although the households in our survey only recently moved to nonurban areas, over one-fourth had lived previously in their new community or had a family member living there earlier. Being familiar with the area before moving apparently minimizes conflicting expectations often held by newcomers and established residents of a community," Dr. De Jong observed.

Using U.S. Census data, the study found that 17 counties in Pennsylvania underwent "turn around growth," with population declining during the 1960's but increasing in the 1970's. Many of these counties were rural areas located primarily in the northeastern, southwestern, and west central parts of the Commonwealth.

Several counties—notably Bucks, Centre, Cumberland, Lebanon, Monroe, and Pike—gained population during the 15-year period from 1960 to 1975. These are generally suburban counties, it was pointed out, especially those in the southeast plus the Pocono and northern tier counties, and central counties containing a major college or university.

Population declined during the 15-year period from 1960 to 1975 in the counties of Philadelphia, Blair, Allegheny, Schuylkill, and five primarily rural counties. Population declined only from 1970 to 1975 in Beaver, Delaware, Mifflin, and Warren counties.

An emerging pattern shows 19 counties that have changed from net out-migration in the 1960's to net in-migration between 1970 and 1975. With the exception of Luzerne and Lackawanna counties, these are primarily rural areas scattered throughout the state.

An emerging pattern shows 19 counties that have changed from net out-migration in the 1960's to net in-migration between 1970 and 1975. With the exception of Luzerne and Lackawanna counties, these are primarily rural areas scattered throughout the state.

On a national average, 131 people moved out of metropolitan areas from 1970 to 1975 for every 100 people who moved into them. This was a national "turn around," De Jong and Keppel said, since 94 people moved out of metropolitan areas during the late 1960's for every 100 people moving in.

Copies of the Penn State study are available from the Mailing Room, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802.

FFA picnic held

LEBANON - Approximately twenty members and guests of the Cedar Crest FFA gathered at the Cyrus Bomberger Farm near Lebanon for a picnic and meeting.

The members and their guests enjoyed swimming and boating in Bomberger's scenic pond.

The meal included homemade baked beans, hot dogs, bar-b-que, chips and homemade cupcakes. The meal was prepared by the Bomberger family.

After the meal a business meeting was held. Other Summer events were reviewed and upcoming events were discussed.

Many members joined in a touch football game after the meeting.

One of the evenings highlights was seeing and feeding some of the large fish in Bomberger's pond.

The enjoyable evening concluded with more boating and swimming.

Activities begin at Maryland Fair

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Judging in the 4-H and FFA department started out at a less frantic pace at this years's ninety-eighth Maryland State Fair in Timonium, as a first-ever Saturday opening gave one extra day in the activity schedule.

The 4-H dog obedience and grooming show was held Saturday morning in the year-old Cow Palace arena. It was followed in the afternoon by the sixth annual 4-H bicycle contest at the same location.

Sunday's competitive events included a 4-H and FFA rabbit show, unwashed lamb fitting and showing contest, ladies lead (sheep), Pretty Cow contest and dairy steer show. There was also a 4-H rabbit judging contest.

The always large 4-H horse and pony show got under way for its annual four-day run in the lighted outdoor arena next to the new Exhibition Hall at the west side of the fairground.

Mark Traband, 16, of Forest Hill, Harford county, easily outdistanced all competition to ride away with the senior championship for 14 to 19-year-olds in the 4-H bicycle contest at this year's Maryland State Fair in Timonium.

Other top competitors were as follows:

Juniors (ages 9-11)

Chris Cocco, Elkton; Robert Overstreet, Severn; Kenneth Hunt, Flintstone; Benjamin Partlow, Gaithersburg. Partlow was named junior champion.

Intermediate (ages 12-13)

Charlie Sasscer, Upper Marlboro; Brian McDowell, of Rising Sun; Mary Brown, Rising Sun. Brian McDowell was named intermediate champion. He had been junior champion at the state fair in 1977.

Seniors (ages 14-19)

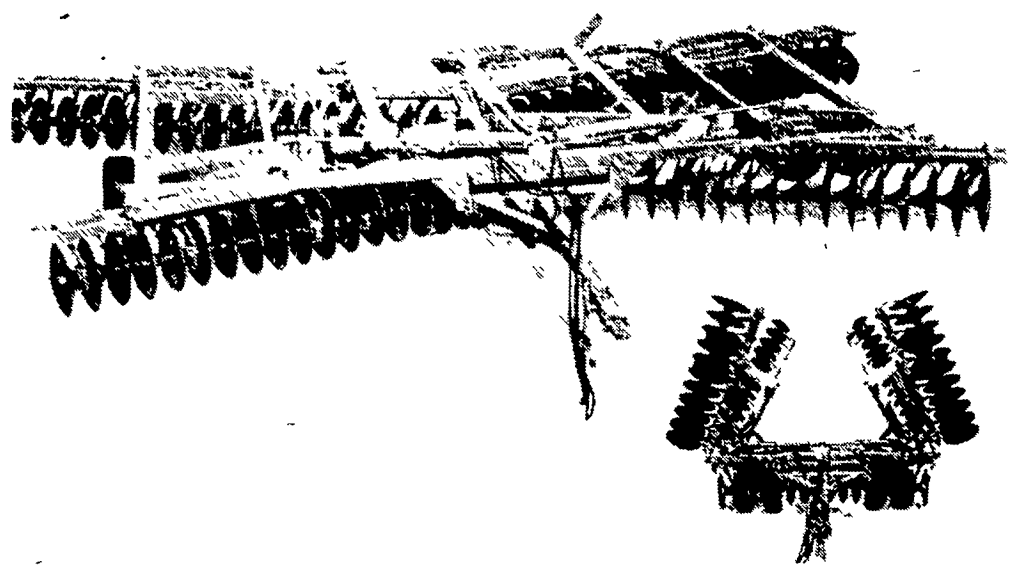
Superior penetration featured in tandem disc

STRATTON, Neb. — Miller Manufacturing Company introduced the new Series I tandem disc which offers superior penetration and cutting characteristics. With weights ranging from 7,000 lbs. to 18,700 lbs. and cutting widths from 12½ foot to 31 foot, the Series I tandems are especially designed for today's high horsepower tractors.

Series I tandem discs are built with compact frames which provide great strength and durability through the use of bracing and doubled tubing at stress points. They are available in rigid or fold-up flex models.

The flex models feature the patented hydraulic axle cylinder control unit which gives positive mechanical depth control and wheel transport lock down. The hydraulic axle control is automatically sequenced with the wing folding cylinders in both the up and down positions so the wings lift slightly in turns and the machine pivots easily on the main frame wheels.



Series I tandem discs have been introduced by Miller Manufacturing Company. They feature superior penetration and cutting characteristics. Built with compact frames, they provide great strength and durability.

All Series I tandems have a patented hydraulic leveling unit that controls soil flow and soil leveling. Without leaving the tractor seat, the operator can quickly adjust the back section pressure as required to level the outer ridges and fill the center exactly.

Miller Series I tandem discs are built with 22-, 24-, or 26-inch diameter blades. Close front section spacing is used for better crop residue and weed cutting, with wider back section spacing to more easily handle and condition the soil.

Full details are available on request. Write Miller Manufacturing Company, Stratton, Nebraska 69043.

Montour Co. has final acre ceremony

DANVILLE—A "Final Acre" Ceremony was held to recognize completion of soil mapping in Montour County, it was announced today by Walter Loncosky, Chairman of the Montour Conservation District.

The event was held Tuesday, August 28, on land owned by Charles Keiter along Kaseville Road north of the Red Lane intersection.

Completion of the project culminates two years' work by soil scientists provided through the U.S. Soil Conservation Service. Sampling and typing Montour County soil over that period were Paul Parrish and Joseph (Jake) Eckenrode.

Importance of soil mapping is underscored by the need for soils information to determine feasibility of all land use, ranging from suitability for homes, streets and public buildings to productive farm land. The current mapping program will provide a more accurate updating of the county's original mapping, completed in 1941.

To underscore the vastness of the project, Loncosky explained there are 45 soil types included in the county mapping. Although Montour County is small in size, countless earth samples were necessary to complete the 83,200 acres.

Site for the ceremony was selected because of its appropriateness in potential future use and its convenience, Loncosky said. The site is in Mahoning Township, a rapidly developing area of the county.

A complete report of the soils information is currently being published. Meanwhile, the information is available in both the district and SCS offices. Public and local officials may obtain assistance in securing the information by contacting district staff.

New tax status proposed for conservation costs

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Federal and state conservation cost-sharing payments to farmers would not count as income for federal tax purposes under proposed regulations announced by Acting Secretary of Agriculture Jim Williams.

In calling for public comment on the proposal, Williams said the Secretary of the Treasury also must make a separate determination that the payments do not substantially increase the farmer's income for the exemption to qualify.

The proposed rule would apply to payments after Sept. 30.

Conservation payments which are proposed for exemption include those to conserve soil and water resources, protect and restore the environment, improve forests or provide habitat for wildlife.

Today's proposal also would define state programs so that payments received under programs of substate entities such as natural resource districts and counties would also be excluded from gross income.

Comments should be sent by Sept. 24 to Arnie Miller, room 117-A, Administration Bldg., USDA, Washington, D.C., 20250.

Tomato blossom-end rot on increase

MEDIA — If some of your tomatoes are shrunken and black on the blossom end, or the bottom of the fruit, they are suffering from blossom-end rot. According to experts, this condition also affects peppers and eggplants. However, the rotting occurs on the side of the fruit and the affected area will be black or white and have a paper-like texture. Blossom rot is not a plant disease. It is referred to as a physiological disorder. This condition usually affects young green fruit and will first appear as a dry-leather-like area which will be brown at first, and later turn black from the mold organisms which invade the dead tissue. As soon as you detect affected fruit, pick them off the plant and discard them. Blossom-end rot is caused by a lack of calcium and low soil moisture conditions. Calcium in the soil must be in solution form to be absorbed by the roots. If the soil is dry the calcium will not be transported into the plant. If the soil is maintained at a pH of 6.0 to 6.5 there will be sufficient calcium to prevent this condition. Tomatoes and peppers require one inch of water each week. If this amount is not supplied by rainfall, the deficit should be made up by additional watering. On rare occasions blossom-end rot can be caused by too much water.

Roots need oxygen to take up mineral elements from the soil. Excessive water from extended rainstorms will prevent the calcium from moving into the plant and blossom-end rot will result.

Schmuch wins 4-H Ayrshire competition

HARRISBURG — Nine-year veteranf Ayrshire exhibitor Sandra Schmuch of Peach Bottom R2 topped her last year's breed placing at the 4-H District Show by capturing the Senior and grand championship spots on Monday at the Farm Show Building.

Her two-year-old "Cove Creek Victory's Vel" earned the purple ribbons for the 18-year-old owner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Schmuch. Sandy is already well started in the dairy industry and owns a herd of 11 head.

Taking the reserve senior and grand honors was Diane Maulfair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Maulfair of Jonestown R1. It was a repeat performance of the junior classes, where 18-year-old Diane also captured the reserve placing with her first place senior yearling heifer. Diane's aged cow senior reserve winner and the junior winner are just two of the herd of six she's accumulated during eight years of 4-H dairy participation.

Ayrshire honors went to Sandra Schmuck, right, with her senior and grand winner. Diane Maulfair earned the reserve ribbons.

The junior champion rosette went to Joey Welsh, East Berlin R1 who topped all heifer contenders with a junior yearling. Joey is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Welsh and is a veteran exhibitor with seven years of ring experience.

Deborah Weaver, Manheim, won the junior calf class over second place Debra Shetterly of Millersburg and Ronald Weaver, Fredericksburg, who placed third. Junior winner Joey Welsh, East Berlin, also won the intermediate calf class, with Steven Shetterly, Millersburg, second, and Karen Schmuck, Peach Bottom, third. Bonnie Wire, Spring Grove, won the senior calf division.

Joey Welsh's junior yearling beat out second place Deborah Shetterly, Millersburg, with Elaine Maulfair, third, Anita Brommer, fourth, and Tracy Buffington, Millersburg, fifth.

Diane Maulfair, Jonestown, won the senior yearling top placing, with Karen Schmuch in second and Steven Shetterly, third. Winner of the county herd in the Ayrshire classes was a group entered by Lebanon County.

New ag teacher at Penn Manor

MILLERSVILLE - Dale Ishman, a 1977 Penn State graduate is the latest addition to the vo-ag staff at Penn Manor High School. Ishman, who will be devoting most of his attention to the school's Young Farmer program, began working within the past two weeks.

Ishman grew up on an 80-acre general farm in Jefferson County, where the family raised hogs, beef cattle and hay. While a student at Penn State, he worked part-time on a 500-acre beef farm near State College.

At Penn State, Ishman was president of the collegiate FFA, vice-president of the Alpha Tau Alpha scholastic fraternity and recipient of the Keystone Farmer degree in 1976. He holds a Pennsylvania state license as an emergency medical technician. He taught for a year in Jefferson County, where he also worked as a loader operator and welder for a coal company.

At Penn Manor, Ishman will be teaching two regular classes of vo-ag daily, and will be spending the rest of his time with the Young Farmer program. As a first project, Ishman said he hopes to help farmers in the Penn Manor school district run yield checks on their corn crops this year. He plans to hold an initial meeting with members and prospective members in late September.

Other programs he plans to cover will include estate planning, forage management and farm building engineering.

Emergency first aid instruction will also be included in the year's program, according to Ishman. His background as an emergency medical technician gives him unusually comprehensive insight into the first aid requirements of farm accident victims.

Ishman said he's anxious to hear from farmers in the Penn Manor district with ideas for Young Farmer programs and activities. He can be reached by phoning 872-5431.

Bucks County Farmers sponsor open farm tours

QUAKERTOWN — The Bucks County Farmers Association and the Cooperative Extension Service invite the public to participate in an Open Farm Tour on Saturday, September 8. There will be eight places in the county that will be open to visitors from 10 - 4 p.m. The association urges urban neighbors to visit with farm families and learn more about the industry.

Following is a brief description of the farms and agricultural businesses that are participating in the day.

The Quakertown Veterinary Clinic, on the Old Bethlehem Pike has three practicing veterinarians. The clinic features X-Ray and diagnostic facilities. The veterinarians treat small animals at the clinic and large animals on farms.

The number two spot is the farm of Isaac Geissinger and Sons. This farm is located at the Old Bethlehem Pike and Grant Road. They milk 200 cows in a carousel parlor and farm 900 acres of crops. They retail eggs from 12,000 laying hens and produce capons.

A carousel milking parlor is used to milk 145 cows on the Keyser Brothers farm of Brick Tavern Road. This farm features Harvestore silos and a liquid manure system. The Keyser brothers farm 650 acres of grain and hay crops.

Windy Springs Farm is located on Myers Road near Steinburg Road and features 200 sows and piglets. There are thirty steers fattened in a year from a brood cow herd. Wilmer Mood, owner of the 650 acre farm, also sells snowmobiles.

The fifth location participating in the open farm tours is the Philip Rosenberger farm at Weiss and Bauman Road. They milk 45 cows with a pipeline milker. Heifers are kept in a free stall barn and 300 chickens are raised. The Rosenberger's board 13 horses and give riding lessons.

Custom grinding and mixing of livestock feed takes place at the sixth stop of the Bucks County tours. The Clover Leaf Mill, Milford square is also the center for lawn and garden supplies.

A wholesale fruit and vegetable business is operated by John Auckland and Sons of 472 Milford Square and Mill Hill Roads. All visitors will be interested in seeing the machine harvest of sweet corn and how the corn is graded for the retail market.

A real specialty of the tour will be a visit with a retired farmer, Thomas White, of Tollgate and Trumbauersville Roads. This location features 100 doe and young rabbits of which the young are raised for meat. White is also a beekeeper.

The Bucks County Open Farm tour is sure to have something that will interest everyone. Maps and information about the participating farms will be available at each location. Visitors are welcome to visit farms of their choice.

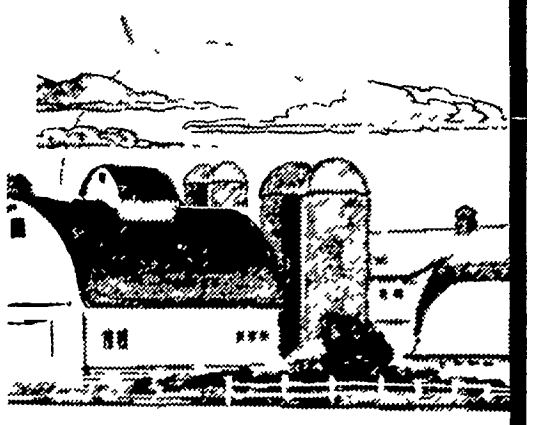
The New York Aquarium boosted attendance markedly when it launched a search for a "bargain monster," reports the August Reader's Digest. The aquarium wanted a creature that was both unusual and economical to catch. The answer: a giant sea roach called Bathynomus giganteus, a common monster 60 million years ago but comparatively rare today. After a search team delivered six of the creatures to the Aquarium, admissions soared, even in the dead of winter.

Have You Purchased Your SILAGE and HIGH MOISTURE CORN ADDITIVES or PRESERVATIVES For The coming Season?



With the large selection of products available to you today, deciding which way to turn brings important questions to be answered...

?? The Questions ??

1 WHAT AM I GOING TO USE ON MY SILAGE THIS YEAR?
A An Enzyme Based Product?
B A Yeast Preparation?
C A Urea Product?
D A Molasses Based Product?
E A Cultured Additive?

2 WHAT WILL TOTAL COST OF THE PREPARATION BE?
A Cost Per Ton!
B Coverage Per Ton!
C Total Return Vs Dollar Investment!

3 HOW WILL I APPLY THE PRODUCT I CHOOSE?
A Easy Application!
B Requires Special Aplicator!
C Must Be Applied By Hand!

Now .Let us give you answers to the above questions in relationship to our product. ALFA-ZYME!

!! The Answers !!

1 ALFA-ZYME is a fermented enzyme product injected onto a fine grade alfalfa (a top grade carrier of enzymes) We have the ORIGINAL ENZYMES PRODUCT!

2 The COST of ALFA-ZYME Vs return for your dollar is fantastic While other products use minimal lbs per ton, ALFA-ZYME requires 50 Lbs for every 3 tons of silage or high moisture corn A 120 ton silo takes 40 bags or 1 tone of ALFA-ZYME

3 We realize we might not have the easiest product to apply, but after application we have that "SOMETHING SPECIAL" that makes better silage and corn! (No, we don't have an "easy applicator" but then again if your results are not satisfactory with "easily applied" products, all you end up with is a useless "easy applicator!")

We hope the above information has captured your attention Now we have a few questions of our own

1 Do you realize the product you choose will determine the outcome of your silage up to the next filling season? You can change your feeding program often, but the product you apply to your silage or corn must work the coming winter, spring and summer months!

2. Have you already purchased a product because of an early discount or "special deal"? If so, try this test.. fill ½ your silo with the other product and then add ALFA-ZYME to the remainder Make 1979 the year you make the test!

IN SUMMARY...

Making BETTER SILAGE and HIGHER MOISTURE CORN is our main business. And, ALFA-ZYME has been proven on farms like yours in PA, MD, VA, and W. VA.

NOW...THE FINAL QUESTION!...
Where can I purchase ALFA-ZYME?...Ask your feed dealer, farm store operator, call or write:

Inflation Fighting Ideas

Consumers' New Weapon Against Rising Food Costs

An unexpected technique for holding down rising food prices is in the bag a bag that helps keep the food inside fresh, and then—presto chango—can be recycled for a host of household uses

The new plastic netting bags let shoppers see what they're buying and keep produce fresher than conventional plastic wraps

The plastic net provides the ventilation needed by such produce as onions, potatoes, and apples The bags hug the produce without blocking the flow of air. This material, Du Pont's "Vexar" plastic netting, is also being used to provide a protective merchandising wrap on frozen premium turkeys.

Because these bags help protect food from spoiling from inadequate ventilation or a buildup of humidity, both the consumer and the supermarket get some relief from the cost that food spoilage might otherwise entail

Unlike most food packages that wind up in the trash, "Vexar" bags are usable They can be turned into good scouring pads,

Even if conservation isn't your bag, new plastic mesh packaging will challenge and reward your ingenuity.

safe on non-stick or "Teflon" finishes, or can be recycled as tote bags for just about anything They can be used to hold small items together in the washing machine and are convenient in the bathroom for hanging loose items, like children's bath toys, to dry

The plastic netting bags are also helpful in organizing the freezer You can bag orange juice cans, hamburger patties or extra ice cubes for a party And they're handy for wrapping foil covered steaks because they prevent the foil from being torn

If you want to bag some savings, keep in mind that plastic mesh bags can help keep food fresh longer—and may net you a handy helper in the household!

Let sweets mature-don't harvest early

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — Don't harvest sweet potatoes too early. The sweet potato is a tropical plant and requires a long time to reach maturity. Most varieties take 120 days to mature, consequently sweet potatoes planted about May 15 will not be ready to harvest until the first week in October.

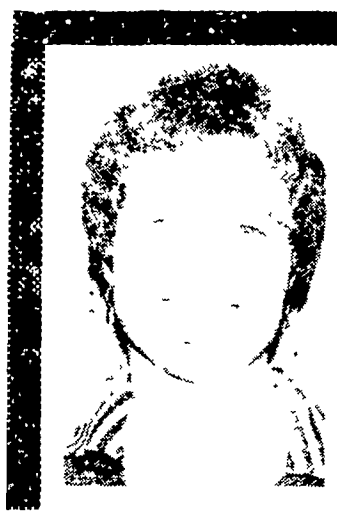
Sweet potatoes dug too early are often watery and flat tasting. Those that grow the full season should have a nut-like flavor.

Weather conditions also affect the sweet potato quality. If you are lucky enough to have dry, sunny weather about two weeks before harvest, the crop will partially cure in the soil and the quality will be superior.

Sweet potatoes should be dug with care and handled gently to avoid bruising the tender skin. Harvesting on a sunny day allows the roots to dry well before being placed in storage.

The crop should be cured as soon as it is dug. This means storing at 85 degrees in a compartment that has high humidity and good air ventilation. After ten days lower the temperature to 55 degrees.

Curing is very important. It hardens the skin and a corky layer of protective tissue forms. This protects the potatoes from excessive shrinkage and heals wounds that would otherwise become infected with storage rot.



On being a farm wife

—And other hazards

JOYCE BUPP

"Gee, I wonder what it would be like to be without kids?" mused a close friend just the other day.

A piercing shriek that accompanied my barefoot encounter with a cold, slippery sliver of peach on the kitchen floor had brought forth her speculation.

"Well, for one thing, my refrigerator wouldn't be labeled 'Garbage Dump'," I replied, pointing out the green and white foot-square sign that the kids had fastened on the door.

Had we had the time. I might have given her several more examples:

—We would never experience the joy of creating pink and blue flecked pot pie dough because the kids had been using the rolling pin for Play-Doh creations;

—No one would ever park their toy tractor on the steps for me to find as I came down carrying a rounded-full basket of dirty laundry;

—My toes would not be permanently pock-marked from midnight meetings with indestructible plastic building blocks;

—There would not be five "Oh, mom. can't we bring them into the porch" kittens under my feet everytime I opened the back door;

—And I would have completely missed out on one profound truth about life: you can ride the sooper-dooper-looper roller coaster after age 30 and still live to tell about it. But just barely.

Study light horses at home

UNIVERSITY PARK - Available from the Correspondence Course office at Penn State is a course on Light Horses.

The 11-lesson course discusses: horse anatomy and selection; reproduction; parasites; buildings; equitation; training; breeds; stable management; and unsoundness.

According to the course, practice and training of both horses and riders are necessary for satisfactory performance. Riders must control their mounts and control is centered on the mental, not the muscular activities of the horse.

To help you enjoy horse ownership more, you should send for the course. Intended for the beginners, the information is valuable to members of riding clubs, and individuals who expect to buy a horse.

The course may be obtained by sending $6.00, plus 25 cents postage, to LIGHT HORSES, Box 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make check payable to Penn State.

New feeder cattle grade standards effective September 2

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell recently reminded farmers that new USDA feeder cattle grade standards, which include frame size, will go into effect September 2, 1979.

"These revised standards will bring the feeder cattle grading system up-to-date with the type of cattle that are now be produced," Hallowell explained. "The old standards considered only one factor, muscle thickness. New breeds have had a tremendous impact, accounting for the increase of size and scale on our cattle. Along with 1976 changes in slaughter and beef carcass standards, frame size has been added as a factor in determining feeder animal grades," the Agriculture Secretary said.

The new grades will separate feeder cattle into large, medium and small frame sizes and thickness categories of No. 1, No. 2, and No. 3. Frame size – the most important consideration – will identify the weight at which feeder cattle are expected to produce carcasses of a given grade, such as U.S. Choice. Thickness will identify a feeder for the effect that muscle thickness has on the ultimate U.S. yield grade of its carcass.

Hallowell noted that copies of the new standards are available from the Agricultural Marketing Service, Room 2618-S, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Drying herbs requires proper handling

MEDIA — Home-dried herbs can be just a tasty as those you buy at the store. However, they take proper handling from the garden to spice jar. Experts have these suggestions for drying your herb bounty. Most herbs are at their peak of flavor just before flowering, so this is a good time to collect them for drying and storage. Cut off the herbs early in the morning just after the dew has dried. Cut annuals off at ground level and perennials about one-third down the main stem, including the side branches. Wash herbs, with the leaves on the stems, lightly in cold running water to remove any soil, dust, bugs or other foreign material. Drain thoroughly on absorbent towels or hang plants upside down in the sun until the water evaporates. Strip leaves off the stalks once plants have drained and dried, leaving only the top six inches. Remove all blossoms. Herbs must be dried thoroughly before storing. High-moisture-content herbs, such as mint and basil, need rapid drying or they will mold. To retain some green leaf coloring, dry in the dark by hanging plants upside down in bunches in paper bags. Hanging leaves down allows essential lils to flow from stems to leaves. Tie whole stems very tightly in small bunches–individual stems will shrink and fall. Hang in a dark, warm, well-ventilated, dust-free area. Leaves are ready when they feel dry and crumbly–in about one to two weeks. Store in airtight containers away from the light.

WHAT'S NEW

Tank Bottom Shield Protects Environment

Long term use of gauge poles may lead to a costly puncture in any fiberglass or steel tank. It is a seemingly unavoidable risk because measurements must be taken regularly. But there is now a way to economically protect tank bottoms from pole wear. Weil's Tank Bottom Shield absorbs the impact of gauge pole strikes and eliminates the possibility of this kind of failure. Its all steel construction insures maximum strength and lasting durability, while the buna-N bottom pad cushions the tank bottom from the shield.

Weil Tank Bottom Shields are easily installed in both new and existing tanks. Simply squeeze the splines together, insert it in the drop tube, and push it to the bottom of the tank with a gauge pole. No other tool is necessary. The splines remain compressed inside the drop tube, locking the Shield firmly in place. It is an easily removed just by lifting out the inside aluminum core of the drop tube. Tank Bottom Shields have been tested and approved by most major oil companies. The Shield can only be used in tanks with drop tubes. Weil can supply drop tubes for thos who have no regular source. Full particulars on Bulletin dn-16 from Weil Service Products Corporation, 2434 West Fletcher Street, Chicago, Illinois 60618.

Christine Gilt wins district Holstein Show

By JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG — Holstein entries were first in the ring when the 4-H district dairy show kicked off at 9 a.m. Monday at the Farm Show Building. The youthful exhibitors underwent three concurrent competitions, being sized up for animal type while fitting and showmanship officials gazed a critical eye for show technique.

Type judge for the five-breed-day-long roundup was Genie L. Francisco, Holstein breeder from Andover, New Jersey. Dairyman Jason Myers of Westminster, Maryland, was in charge of placing the showmanship winners and David Dunbar, Lehigh County Extension Agent, selected for fitting awards. Chairman of the multi-county competition was John Harris, Dauphin County agent.

Top winners of the Holstein competition were seasoned 4-H showladies Chris Gitt and Joyce Stoltzfus.

Chris Gitt, right, claimed the senior and grand championship of the 4-H district Holsteins show. Joyce Stoltzfus exhibited the reserve winner.

Chris Gitt, 18-year-old Adams Countian, won the senior and grand championship honors with her three-year-old daughter of Elevation, "Janibo Dian Elevation." Judge Francisco praised the animal's superior foreudder over the reserve animal, but complimented Joyce Stoltzfus' four-year-old contender's size and scale.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gitt, Littlestown, Chris is in her eighth year of 4-H competition and will be a freshman at Virginia Polytechnic Institute in September. She is the current Adams County Dairy Princess and assisted in awarding ribbons, as well as exhibiting, at the district roundup.

Reserve champion winner Joyce Stoltzfus bids farewell to the 4-H showing after state competition next month. She's 19, a former Lancaster County dairy princess and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathan B. Stoltzfus of Gap. Her reserve winning daughter of Harrisburg Gay Ideal also earned her the champion honors recently at the Lancaster 4-H show and was named a junior champion in 1976.

Winner of the junior championship was a beautifully scaled junior yearling, topping her class in heighth as well as dairyness. She's bred and owned by 17-year-old David Bomgardner and also won for him the reserve junior championship at the recent Lebanon area show. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey T. Bomgardner, David has accumulated a herd of ten animals in his seven years of 4-H competition.

Classes will be conducted in October in Meadville, Reading and Wilkes-Barre at specific sites selected for their convenience to those interested, Glenn E. Maurer, Sewage Planning and Training Section chief in that bureau's Sewage Facilities Act Administration Division, announced.

He asked those interested to contact the DER Environmental Protection Office most convenient to them or to write or call his bureau's central office, Box 2063, 15th Floor Fulton Building, Harrisburg, PA 17120; phone (717) 787-9032. Regional contact points and their telephone numbers are: Meadville, (814) 724-8520; Reading, (215) 670-0991; and Wilkes-Barre, (717) 826-0991.

Maurer said that preregistration is required because class sizes must be limited and that openings will be filled on a first-come basis.

In addition to this training series, DER offers seminars on Pennsylvania's Sewage Facilities Act for township supervisors who request them through the department's field or central offices.

The State Board for Certification of Sewage Enforcement Officers has scheduled examinations for this certification for November 3 in Butler and Harrisburg. Course participation is not an examination pre-requisite.

Details about participating in these examinations should be directed to: Secretary, State Board for Certification of Sewage Enforcement Officers, Box 2063, Harrisburg, PA 17120; telephone (717) 783-8059.

All-American dairy show entries due

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell recently reminded dairy farmers that September 5 is the last day to enter the 16th Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show to be held September 24 to 28 at the Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

Hallowell challenged dairymen in the Commonwealth to bring their best cattle to the All-American and "compete with the best in the East. Competition is one of the greatest incentives for the improvement and advancement of a farmer's herd," the Agriculture Secretary said.

"For the third year in a row," Hallowell said, "the 1979 All-American will feature three national breed shows The Eastern National Ayrshire Show, the Eastern National Brown Swiss Show and the Eastern National Holstein Show will be held in conjunction with the All-American. In addition, the All-american show for Guernsey, Jersey and Milking Shorthorn dairy cattle will be featured on the bill of events with more than $60,000 in premiums at stake."

In conjunction with the shows, there will be an invitational Brown Swiss and Holstein sale.

Youth judging contests, the Pennsylvania Junior Dairy Show, Pennsylvania Dairy Princess coronation ceremonies, commercial booth exhibits, 4-H and FFA dairy judging forum, international visitor activities and many more events surround the action packed five-day show.

For additional information one can contact the Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show, Farm Show Building, P.O. Box 3362, Harrisburg, PA 17120, or call 717-787-2905.

The Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy and Allied Industries Association in cooperation with the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania State Farm Show Commission.

HOMEMADE SOUP IS NUTRITIOUS AND AND LOW COST

One of the good things about the "good old days" was homemade soup. Soup can be an easy way to make sure your family gets a nutritious meal plus it's an economical way to use surplus garden produce.

Save juice from canned vegetables, meat bones, bits of cabbage, celery and even lettuce. Instead of throwing out the few vegetables left in the serving dish, toss them into the soup pot. Fill out the soup with the extras from cooked rice, barley, noodles or spaghetti. If fresh vegetables are in short supply, add frozen ones.

That "fine kettle of soup" can also be good for calorie-counters. There are several ways to remove the fat that collects during cooking. The easiest way is to chill the soup and remove the solid layer of fat from the top.

If you can't wait to cool the soup put an ice cube in a cloth and move it around just under the surface of the soup to collect the rising fat. Another suggestion is to float a paper towel on top of the soup. Throw out the towel when it has absorbed as much fat as it will hold.

If cooking for one or two, prepare a kettle full of your favorite recipe and store a serving or two in the refrigerator for tomorrow or the next day. Freeze the rest in quantities of one or two servings.

REMOVING STAINS FROM MARBLE

When you think of marble, you tend to think of a hard, durable surface that has withstood the ravages of time. Actually marble is very porus and stain removal can be difficult.

The method for removing stains from marble surfaces varies according to the substance that causes the stain.

It's essential to wipe spills from marble immediately. But once a stain exists, it must be bleached out of the marble. The marble is than polished to restore its surface lustre.

Stains caused by tea, coffee and tobacco should be washed with warm water. Then apply a bleach of hydrogen peroxide mixed at "hair bleach"strength with a few drops of ammonia added to the stained area. Rinse the entire surface with clear water and dry with a chamois.

Ink stains call for a warm water wash, then wipe with a cloth dampened in household ammonia. If this does not remove the stain, use bleach using the procedure for tea and coffee.

Lemon juice, vinegar, fruit juice and carbonated beverages etch marble surfaces as well as cause stains. They may requre only a warm water wash followed by polishing. If the stain persists then use the bleaching procedure for coffee and tea.

Grease and oil stains are the most difficult to remove from marble. Grease and oil sink in and spread, leaving a stain that will not come out entirely.

After removing stains from marble, polish the surface with tin oxide putty powder--also called polishing powder. Wet the marble and sprinkle the powder over the dull area. Use the powder sparingly. A little goes a long way.

Using a damp cloth, rub the marble vigorously. Keep the cloth damp to prevent spotting.

Polishing powder may be difficult to find. If it is not available at hardware stores, check at local marble shops or monument works.

Tested ram and ewe sale held at State College

STATE COLLEGE — Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell today announced the First Performance Tested Ram Lamb Sale and Invitational Ewe Sale will be held at the Pennsylvania Meat Animal Evaluation Center in State College today, starting at 12 noon.

The Secretary said approximately 42 ram lambs representing ten breeds, and 44 ewes will go across the block. The performance tested ram breeds to be sold include: Dorset, Hampshire, Shropshire, Southdown, Merino, Oxford, Corriedale, Columbia, Rambouillet and Suffolk, with the addition of Horned Dorset and Cheviots for the ewe sale. An additional attraction to this sale is the invitational ewe sale. Hallowell noted 32 lambs and 12 yearling purebred ewes will be offered.

"This performance tested ram lamb sale was initiated by the request of sheep producers across the state," the Secretary said. "Producers will have an opportunity to buy sound, performance tested rams that are ready to go into the flock for the fall breeding season," he added.

Fifty-six ram lambs were put on an 80-day test from May 25 to August 13 at the Agriculture Department's Meat Animal Evaluation Center at State College. "During that controlled period," Hallowell said, "the average daily gain of all rams was .73 pounds. The average daily gain ranged from .58 to .99 pounds.

"Prospective buyers will be able to compare each ram lambs' performance test records for weight gain, loin eye area, fat thickness, type score and index." Hallowell noted through ultrasonic scanning of loin eye area, the lambs to be sold range from 3.83 square inches to 1.53 square inches.

Hallowell said careful selection of a new stud ram is a major part of overall flock management. "The genetic potential of a flock can be drastically improved with a stud having good composition of growth with the least amount of fat." Approximately 87 percent of the genetic makeup of a lamb comes from the last three generations of rams used.

Good management and economics show that increased growth rates mean a shorter feeding period because sheep gaining weight faster usually convert feed more efficiently.

"The sheep industry in Pennsylvania is striving to concentrate its efforts on more efficient production of a high quality product," he said. "A ram purchased for its high performance record is much more valuable than one purchased for its pedigree or show winnings."

The Performance Tested Ram Lamb Sale and Invitational Ewe Sale are sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture in cooperation with the Pennsylvania State University and the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association. Lunch and trucking will be available.

Sediment causes less efficient tea kettle

MEDIA - How does your pot boil – or, does your tea kettle sound off with a loud whistle or barely gasp? The culprit might be sediment. And sediment can flake off into your tea or coffee water. Plus it greatly increases the time and therefore the energy it takes for water to boil. The solution is simple, experts suggest you can boil equal parts of white vinegar and water–simmer for ten minutes–and you'll have a more efficient tea kettle and water for tea in minutes.

Wet conditions limit Penna. fieldwork

HARRISBURG — Farm field activities during the week ending August 27 included harvest of potatoes, tobacco, oats, vegetables and fruits including peaches and apples. Limited amounts of tomatoes, snap beans, cabbage and sweet corn were also harvested. Other activities included haying, fall plowing and seeding alfalfa, wheat and barley, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Although five days were rated suitable for fieldwork throughout the commonwealth, periodic precipitation fragmented the time available for fieldwork. The August showers pushed soil moisture levels to 24 percent surplus with 66 percent adequate and ten percent short statewide. Southern counties report 40 percent surplus and 60 percent as adequate to very wet.

LP gas was rated at ten percent tight and 90 percent adequate, with gasoline reported as 20 percent tight and 80 percent adequate. Diesel fuel is now rated two percent deficit, 20 percent tight and 78 percent adequate.

At 13 percent dented, the state's corn crop is on par with last year. The five-year average is 17 percent at this time. Corn is reported 53 percent in dough, compared with 51 percent for both last year and the five-year average. Northern corn is 16 percent, southern is 14 percent, while ten percent of central corn is dented. Less than five percent is mature. Some ensilage corn has been cut. Insect damage is reported above normal.

The potato harvest progressed last week with the crop 30 percent now dug. The northern region advanced its harvest to 39 percent complete, ahead of both the central region at 26 percent and the southern region at 25 percent.

Harvest of oats, at 92 percent complete, is one day ahead of 1978. The north is 85 percent done, central counties are at 94 percent and harvest is virtually complete in southern counties.

Wet conditions slowed hay making as progress increased less than five percent over last week in both second and third alfalfa cuttings, which stand at 82 and 31 percent respectively. At 65 percent harvested, clotim second cutting is four days ahead of last year. Hay made last week was mostly fair to good.

At 24 percent complete, fall plowing is two days behind last year. The north is 20 percent done, central counties report 24 percent and the south is at 29 percent complete. Frequent rains hindered progress of fall seeding of wheat and barley.

Tobacco cutting made progress at 25 percent complete compared with five percent last week. Harvest is five days ahead of last year. Continued wet weather is causing some disease problems.

Harvest continues in peaches and apples, but high moisture content is causing cracking in Stayman apples and some peach varieties. Limited amounts of tomatoes, snap beans, cabbage and sweet corn continue to be harvested.

The satisfaction that comes from doing a good job of farming

It's a great feeling to know that you are the master of your farmlands . that when you treat your soil right, it will treat you right Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range By raising the pH from a level below 6 0 to 6.5 or higher, you can expect to harvest as much as 5 more bushels of corn per acre, with similar increases for all other forage and cash crops

Are You Using A Tank Full of Oil A Month?

Switch To Multi-Fuel Heating & Use A Tankful a Year.

The secret of any family's low oil consumption is neither long underwear nor frequent trips to the Bahamas It is their HS Tarm combination boiler This boiler for central hot-water systems allows them to burn wood and oil When fueled with wood, it heats their house and provides oceans of hot tap water as well Should the wood fire go untended, the oil burner will continue to supply all their heating and hot water needs

Imported from Denmark, the HS Tarm boiler displays traditional Danish quality in design, construction and performance It is available in three sizes, and comes with American-made and approved controls and equipment See less of your oil delivery man

Also can be fired with coal, coke, refuse & electricity

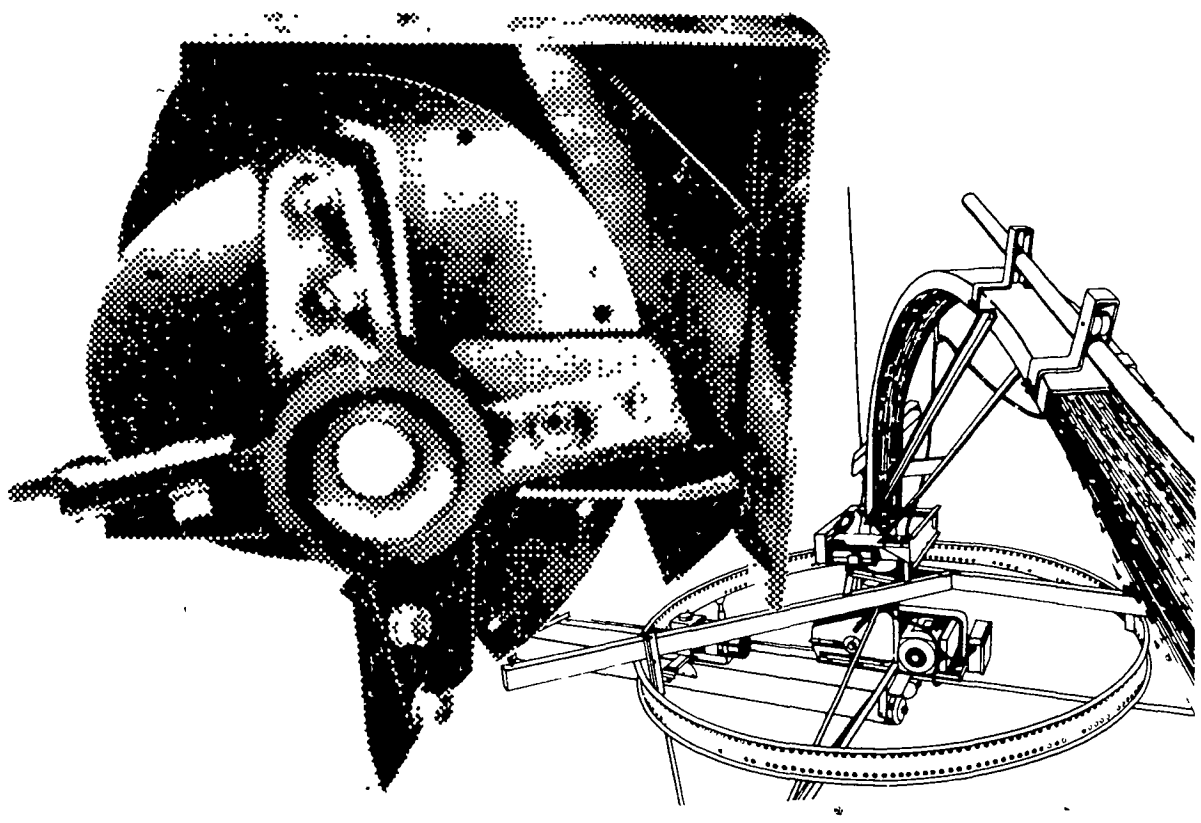
Volumatic® III
silage distributor-unloader
by JAMESWAY®



Cold weather performer

Another reason why all ring-drive silo unloaders are not alike: New four-blade chipper wheel easily removes hard-packed or frozen silage from the silo wall. Blades can be reversed to double their cutting life. Wheel cast of rugged ductile iron to take the daily shock of cutting through stubborn silage.

See us for systems and service that help make the good life better.

Pa. goose blind applications accepted

Applications for hunting from goose blinds at the Pennsylvania Game Commission's two controlled hunting areas at Pymatuning and Middle Creek will be accepted from September 1 through September 20.

Hunters are permitted to apply to only one of the two areas. If a person applies to both areas, that person will not be eligible to hunt on either area.

A hunter will be permitted only one hunting trip to a controlled goose shooting area. If a person hunts geese on one area, that person will not be eligible to return to that facility as a hunter this year, and that person will not be eligible to hunt on the other controlled goose shooting area in 1979.

There are 40 goose blinds at Pymatuning, and 25 will be in operation this year at Middle Creek. Drawings will be held by the Game Commission at Pymatuning and Middle Creek in late September to select blind holders for both controlled shooting areas.

A reservation will entitle the applicant to bring not more than three guests. The guests must be present to register.

At Middle Creek, there will be four shooting days each week of the season, on Mondays, Tuesday, Thursdays and Saturdays. Shooting at Pymatuning will also take place on four days, but on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays.

Reservation requests must be made on official application forms. Application forms for hunting geese at Pymatuning are on orange-colored stock, while the application forms for goose hunting at Middle Creek are on yellow stock. Hunters should be sure to fill out the correct form, since a Middle Creek application cannot be used for Pymatuning or vice versa.

Applications must be submitted either to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, Pymatuning Waterfowl Area, R. D. 1, Hartstown, PA 16131, or to the Pennsylvania Game Commission, Middle Creek Wildlife Management area, R. D. 1, Newmanstown, PA 17073.

The applicant's 1979-80 hunting license number, including the letter, must be listed on the application. Applications must be postmarked no earlier than September 1 but not later than September 20; if the postmark is earlier than September 1 or later than September 20, the application will be rejected.

Only successful applicants, as determined in the drawings, will be notified. Reservations are not transferable.

The successful applicant whose name appears on the reservation must present the reservation in person at either the Pymatuning Waterfowl Area headquarters (registration building) located on Legislative Route 20006 between Hartstown and Linesville about four miles north of Hartstown, or at the Middle Creek Wildlife Management Area visitors center located on Hopeland Road about two miles south of Kleinfeltersville.

Hunters should arrive at least one hour before shooting time to allow for the issuance of permits. All reservations for any one day will be valid only up to one-half hour before shooting time on the specified day.

A federal migratory bird hunting stamp (duck stamp) is required to hunt geese and ducks. 1979-80 hunting licenses and duck stamps must be presented at the check station.

Only one official application per person may be submitted. Anyone submitting more than one application for a reservation will have all applications rejected. Further, individuals filing more than one application or hunting more than one time per person on a controlled goose hunting area in the state will be denied the privilege of hunting on these areas for three years.

Provisions have been made at both Middle Creek and Pymatuning to accommodate handicapped persons if they are successful applicants.

Shooting hours for the controlled goose hunting areas at both Pymatuning and Middle Creek are from one-half hour before sunrise until noon. Hunting starts at 9 a.m. at Pymatuning on November 3. There is no hunting from goose blinds at Middle Creek on November 3.

CENTRAL CONTROL

GREG ESHELMAN

I really couldn't be more satisfied First of all I like the efficiency at harvest With just two of us working, the entire harvest was non-stop

Then the 5¢ per bushel curing cost even included power for installation and our night light

My buyer was quite impressed with my corn Test weight was from 57 to 58 lbs That means I got an extra $300 per 25 ton truck load Even the drivers commented on the good quality

I'm an Ag Engineering student at Penn State, and we do a lot of work with drying systems Out of curiosity I ran the Harvestall design through our computers and found that, for the most important aspect of drying air flow, the Harvestall bin is the optimum design

Actually, the Harvestall is the most profitable part of my operation With better marketing control I make an extra dollar per bushel For the farmer who needs storage or drying, the Harvestall Chillcuring system is the best investment I can think of

The Harvestall Chillcuring System

It's simple. When grain comes out of the field it's a living seed So instead of destroying the seed with high heat, moisture is removed with natural air ventilation. The grain keeps all its feed value, there is less shrinkage than with heat drying because only moisture is removed, not dry matter. You'll never see white dust in Chillcured corn You actually save half of what you're used to losing in heat shrink

There's no gas or oil to buy Natural air carries away heat and moisture as the corn releases it

Harvestall Chillcuring is a back-to-basics system that just simply makes good sense Find out more about it

Cadmium limits determined for sewage sludge

UNIVERSITY PARK – Excessive cadmium in sewage sludge, a pctentially dangerous metal in the food chain, is the key factor hindering development of a sludge-fertilizer industry in Pennsylvania, soil chemists at Penn State commented recently.

"A worthwhile goal is to develop such a fertilizer industry from sludge containing low amounts of cadmium, no more than 20 to 50 parts per million of cadmium in sludge," declared Dr. Dale E. Baker, professor of soil chemistry at University Park. He described 50 parts per million of cadmium as equal to 50 pounds in 500 tons.

Where sludge is applied, soil tests should be used to monitor the level of cadmium in the soil, he advised. Cadmium additions to the soil must not exceed three pounds per acre, based on Pennsylvania guidelines.

Ann M. Wolf, graduate assistant in agronomy, stated that cadmium in soil must be kept at very low levels since it remains within the plow layer and increases the plant and food chain concentrations of cadmium. Sewage sludge applied to Penn State test plots at 10 dry tons per acre for seven years increased soil test levels of cadmium from less than one-half pound per acre to five pounds per acre, an excessive level.

On properly limed soils, farmers can apply up to 30 tons per acre of low cadmium sludge without increasing levels of cadmium above three pounds per acre, Dr. Baker pointed out. From this 30 tons per acre, farm crops will take on valuable nutrients, especially nitrogen and phosphorus.

Feeding studies at Penn State showed that diets containing one to three parts per million of cadmium could increase significantly the level of this element in livers and kidneys of laboratory animals. However, cadmium did not increase greatly the muscle or eggs. The experiments were carried out with field mice, baby chicks, and laying hens.

The Penn State soil chemists stated that scientists do not agree on what are safe dietary levels for cadmium in human food. Currently, the major sources of health-threatening accumulations of cadmium in the human body are food and cigarettes. The conclusions are featured in the Spring issue of "Science in Agriculture," the quarterly magazine of the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State.

For land application of sewage sludge, a municipality or hauler must obtain a permit from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, it was pointed out. Growers, in addition, should not accept or apply sewage sludge on crops without a complete chemical analysis of the sludge. Levels of cadmium and other substances in sludge can be determined directly by the Penn State Soil and Environmental Chemistry Laboratory, 106 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, Pa. 16802.

Information on the procedure is also available from county offices of the Cooperative Extension Service.

The Spring issue of "Science in Agriculture" features this study of cadmium and other research within the Agricultural Experiment Station at Penn State. To get on the free mailing list for each issue, one can write to 229 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, Pa. 16802.

Youth help senior center members

NEWARK, Del. - Don't criticize modern youth within earshot of the members of the Newark Senior Center–unless you're looking for an argument. The Newark Seniors think today's teens are terrific.

That's because the teenagers they know are members of the New Castle county 4-H organization. Karen and Kim Garland, Holly Schutz, and Lynn Patterson, all of Newark, are spending their summer helping the senior center members however they can.

To request 4-H assistance, any Newark Senior Center member may contact Kim Wipf, Extension community research developer for New Castle county. She coordinates the program and accompanies the 4-H members as they mend, scrub or mow--all free of charge.

According to Wipf, mending is the most frequently requested service. It's light work for the 4-H'ers, many of whom learned to sew through the 4-H program, yet it's a formidable task for people whose hands and eyes have lost some of their usefulness over the year.

DOUBLE YOUR BROOD-GROW CAPACITY WHILE REDUCING LABOR AND EQUIPMENT INVESTMENT.

ANNOUNCING
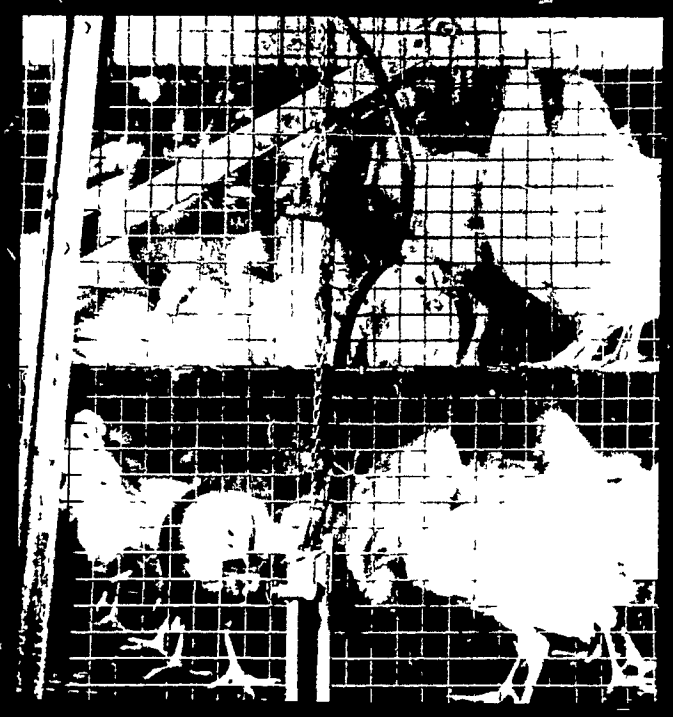
BROOD-GROW
CAGE SYSTEM.



The Northco Double Deck Brood-Grow Cage System from A.R. Wood puts new profit potential in your brood-grow operation. By stacking two cages on top of one another and using a single auger line to supply an upper and lower Master Pan Feeder, we've designed a system that does it all.

Doubles Bird Capacity In new or existing buildings, our new system can double your brood-grow capacity.

Lowers Building Cost Our new system substantially reduces building cost per bird.

Reduces Labor You only handle the birds twice Once to put them in, once to take them out.

Energy Savings Compared to single deck or floor birds, energy usage per bird is substantially reduced.

Performance Our new system has been tested in our growing house and by independent producers. The results are clear: exposure to droppings does NOT affect the uniformity or later egg production of birds in the lower deck.

The Champion steer was exhibited by Jennifer Kinney, Long Valley, N.J.

Pictured with "Baghere," the April 1978, 980 lb. steer bred by Raynham Farms, Hopewell, N.J., are judge Sam Hunter, Smithsburg, Md.; show and chairman Howard Hoffman, Far Hills, N.J; and Jennifer.

Jennifer, the 16-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Kinney, is a twelfth grader at West Morris Central High School and correspondence secretary of the Hunterdon Super Steers 4-H Club.

Andy, the 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Stu Billings, and a sophomore at Taylor University, was also named the reserve senior showman.

The Ephrata Young-Adult Farmers Association won the state vollyeball championship. The team included (front) Clark Stauffer, Earl Stauffer, Dan Fox, (back) Linford Weaver, Rick Pfautz, and Tom Zartman.

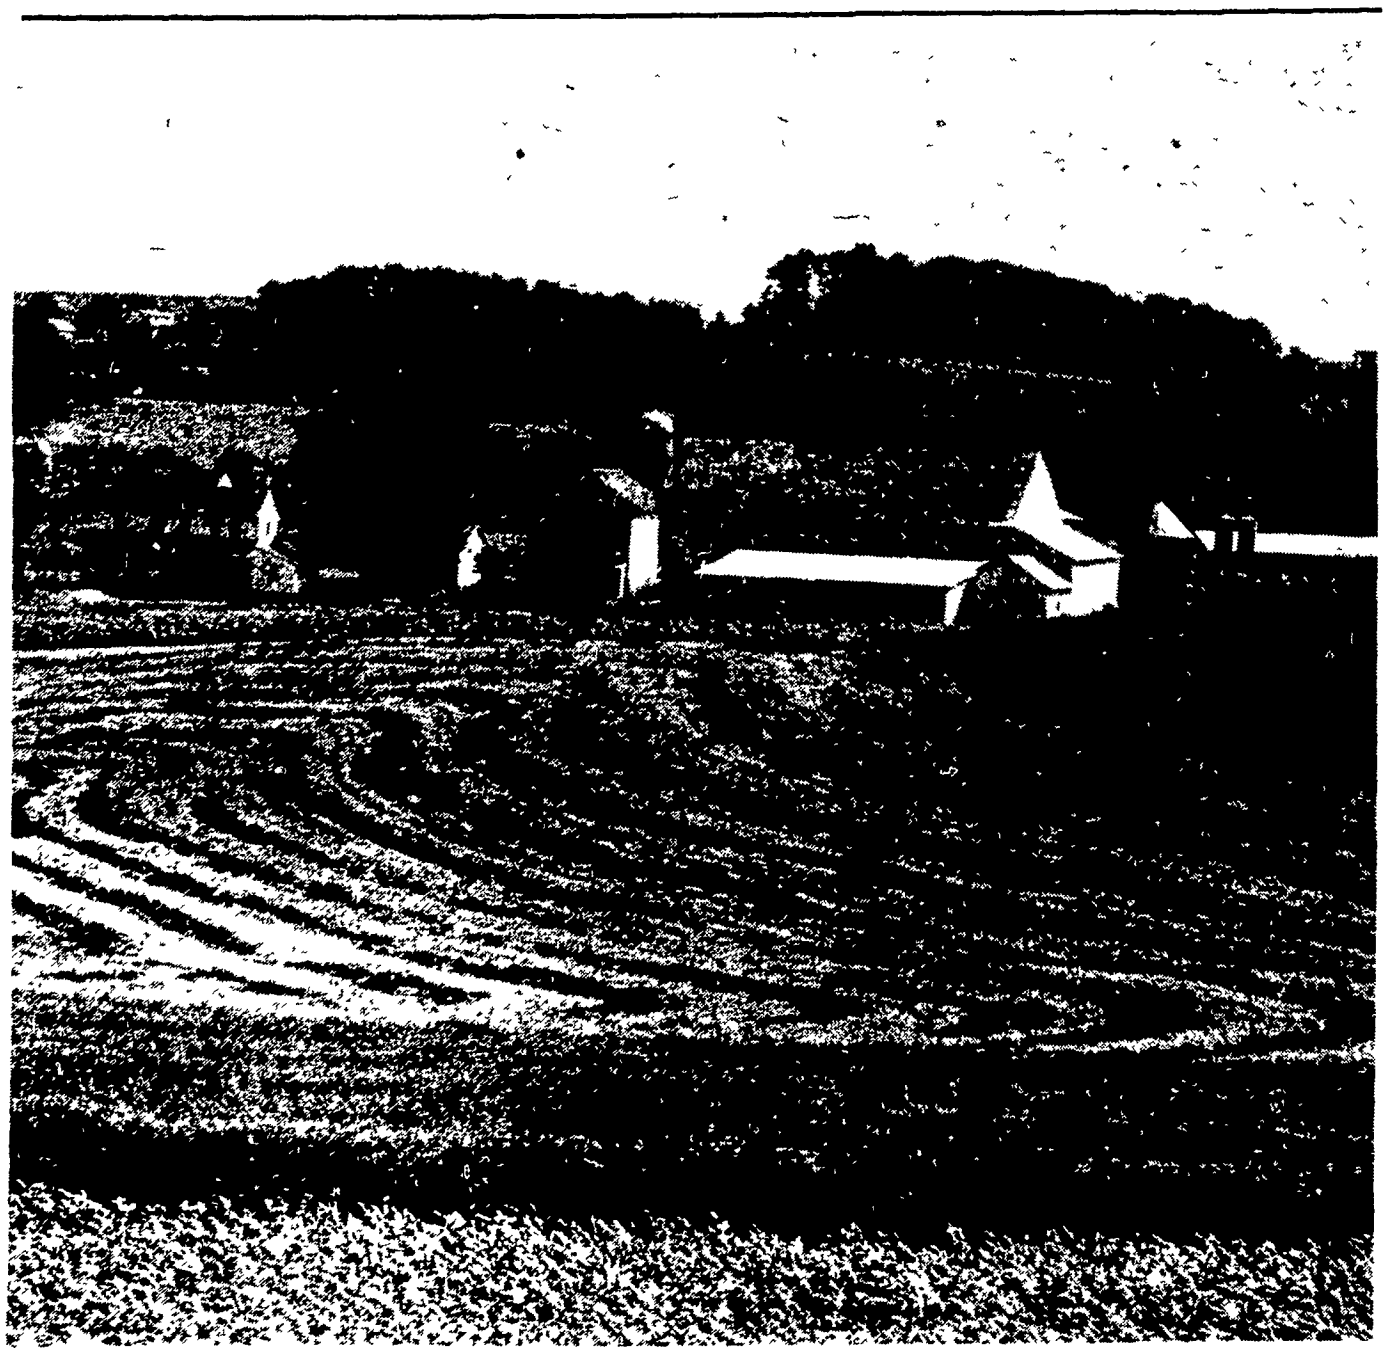
Ephrata YF win state volleyball title

EPHRATA — The Ephrata Area Young-Adult Farmers Association won the state championship at the first Pennsylvania Young Farmers Association volleyball tournament. The tournament was part of the PYFA Summer Institute program held in Schuykill Haven this year.

In the final playoff between Solanco and Ephrata, the Ephrata team pulled ahead to win by a narrow margin of two points. The winning Ephrata team consisted of Clark Stautter, Tom Zartman, Earl Stauffer, Rick Pfautz, Linford Weaver and Dan Fox.

The championship trophy presented to the winning team was sponsored by Madison Silos of Ephrata.

Other PYFA Summer Institute activities included tours to farms and points of interest in Schuykill County, executive meetings and banquet. The Blue Mountain Young Farmers Chapter was this years host.



As Summer dawdles on, the bright sun and blue skies are welcomed by farmers as they hurry doing their harvests; and fair exhibitors who hope that the rain will wait until they are finished showing. This farm scene was taken north of Manheim, Lancaster County.

It's the season for fresh fruit and berries, a great summertime dessert! Make them even better with a mound of dairy sour cream and a bit of brown sugar. For this purpose, the sour cream may be whipped in chilled bowl with chilled beaters to make it even fluffier. It will take longer to whip a fluffy stage than to beat whipping cream until stiff.

Velvetleaf control measures can vary from year to year

SYRACUSE, N.Y.—A recent three-year study conducted by the Agway farm cooperative in Syracuse, New York, shows that preplant incorported herbicides usually provide more effective control of velvetleaf, an annual weed also known as buttonweed, butterprint or Indian mallow.

Velvetleaf is a severe problem in corn throughout the Midwest and eastern states—and university weed specialists say it's spreading. This weed can hinder harvest, lower the quality of the crop, and reduce corn yields by as much as 45 percent to 55 percent or more. Control of velvetleaf is tough because seeds can remain dormant in the soil for many years and still germinate, even after passing through the silo.

With the arsenal of effective herbicides available today, growers can control tough weed problems like velvetleaf. The conculusion of the three-year study, headed by Dr. George Bayer, Agway's senior staff (weed) scientist, can aid growers in their herbicide decision-making.

According to Dr. Bayer, the approach was to evaluate the commercially available herbicides for perplant incorported, preemergence and postemergence control. Field experiments were conducted from 1976 to 1978 on the Agway farm research center in Fabius, New York.

Weather dramatically affected results, Dr. Bayer states. In 1976, there was so much rain in May that the surface preemergence application of atrazine, which is usually poor on velvetleaf, gave 95 percent control. In 1977 and 1978, the rainfall was so low that atrazine applied on the surface was a failure. However, over a two year period, atrazine, when incorporated, gave 80 percent control.

Eradicane or Sutan + with atrazine preplant incorporated provided the most consistent control. Bayer reports, "As individual treatments, Sutan + or Eradicane have considerably activity on velvetleaf. When combined with atrazine, the effect is additive. And in terms of broad spectrum control, these combinations are also very effective against crabgrass, panicum, foxtail, barnyardgrass, pigweed, lambsquarter, mustards and many other species.

"In tests of Eradicane with atrazine applied preplant incorporated, velvetleaf control averaged 97 percent for 1976-1978," Bayer continues. "Sutan + with atrazine applied preplant averaged approximately 95 percent control. These were among the highest averages for control of velvetleaf reported in the study."

Fairly effective as a preemergence material, Prowl was also tested postemergence and gave excellent activity alone and in combinations. (At this time EPA label is pending for the use of Prowl postemergence.) If used early enough, post applications of atrazine, Basagran, Banvel, or Weed Killer 66 (Agway's 2, 4-D) are effective.

Although they give excellent broad spectrum control when used in combinations, Bladex and Lasso as single preemergence treatments were very poor on velvetleaf & in the Agway study.

The surest velvetleaf control program would be preplant incorporation of atrazine with either Sutan + or Eradicane, Bayer concludes. At the same time he warns that even the best and most reliable velvetleaf programs give varying results from year to year and area to area due to weather.

Growers who suspect that they have velvetleaf should contact their local extension office for positive identification and specific control recommendations.

"ENERGY-PAK"

IS OXYGEN CONTROLLED

*WHAT IS AN "ENERGY–PAK" OXYGEN CONTROLLED FEED STORAGE SYSTEM?

The "Energy-Pak" "Oxygen Controlled" Storage System includes a solid, steel reinforced concrete wall with a tough epoxy coating on the inside wall and a cone shaped concrete roof All access openings to the Silage Storage area are round and fitted with air-tight gaskets These round openings are easily clamped tight These features help to control and limit the amount of oxygen that comes in contact with the feed

In operating an "Energy-Pak", prime importance is placed on closing the silo after each filling and feeding operation Proper use of this system significantly reduces the oxygen content in the silo and results in a more ideal condition for maintaining the quality of the feed put into it

PDA to promote ag products

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture has unveiled plans for a statewide, commodity-wide, promotional campaign for Pennsylvania agricultural products.

The campaign, described as "a continuous program", will be coordinated by Jim Summers, Director of the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Markets.

Summers said that the promotion will be kicked off at the 1980 Farm Show in Harrisburg this January.

An advertising firm, Hood, Light, & Geise, of Harrisburg, has been engaged to help hammer out the creative and media strategies.

It has been reported that a logo and slogan will be printed on food packages to show which products are from Pennsylvania.

Merchandisers and markets will be encouraged to run features and specials on Pennsylvania-grown commodities.

The Department is also looking into providing stores and markets with Point-of-Purchase Displays to help with the Pennsylvania Product Promotion.

Public service announcements and outdoor advertising are being considered as supporting media.

Good outlook for local grain farmers

NEWARK, Del. — It looks like Delmarva as well as the rest of the nation are in for some big grain yields this fall. According to the latest figures released recently by the U.S. Crop Reporting Service, national corn and soybean production could once again reach record levels.

Nationally, corn production is estimated at 7.1 billion bushels, up 7 percent from the forecast a month ago. Last year a record 7.08 billion bushels were harvested, so this could well mean a 1979 crop equal to or better than that. University of Delaware extension crops marketing specialist Carl German thinks this is very likely, since a lot of corn is reaching the dent stage now — which means the crop is home free, providing it's not hit by any severely destructive weather.

The 1979 soybean crop looks just as good. The August 10th report projects a record-setting national soybean production of about 2.13 billion bushels. This is the first estimate on the crop, though, and it's still too early to count on. Any untoward weather conditions could cut into this estimate considerably and would also turn prices loose, notes the economist.

Estimates on both the corn and soybean crops reflect favorable growing conditions across the country this summer. Locally, both crops look very good.

Although these harvest predictions are somewhat bearish and point to declining prices, conditions could change rapidly, points out German. So it pays growers to keep a close eye on the market as they develop their selling strategy. Many farmers have already taken steps to hedge part of their crop, using the biweekly production hedging model now available through the Delaware Cooperative Extension Service.

Indications are that this model has been right on target this summer. Growers using it have been aware for several weeks of the trends confirmed by this latest U.S. crop report. This gave some of them a chance to adjust their selling strategy quite profitably.

Growers who haven't already hedged on this year's crops by harvesttime will have fewer options for selling their grain. One possibility would be to sell the portion of your crop you need to meet present obligations and store the balance until prices start to recover. If a large U.S. crop does materialize and prices plummet, it might be wise to consider putting farm-stored corn under government loan — providing you qualify through participation in the federal set-aside program. To warrant doing this though, market prices would have to drop considerably to reach the level of this year's loan guarantee of $2.17 per bushel. And this is something that German doesn't see happening, at least not locally.

As late as August 17 you could contract shelled corn on the Eastern Shore for delivery at harvest for somewhere between $2.70-2.80 a bushel, while beans were selling for around $6.80. Prices such as this can return a reasonable profit to most farmers, notes the marketing specialist, who is optimistic about the grain market here on the Delmarva peninsula.

"You've got to remember that two harvests ago we had a very short crop on the Shore. So, prices should remain somewhat firm because of the need to rebuild local grain supplies — especially in light of current expansion here in the broiler and pork industries," he explains. "Generally speaking, prices are good on the shore now and they should remain good through harvest, though we may see some resistance in price at actual harvesttime."

Supervisor is key to milk testing

NEWARK, Del. - The Delaware Dairy Herd Improvement Association (DHIA) is a non-profit organization of dairy and goat farmers for the purpose of recording information about dairy animals: what they are fed; how they are bred; what calves they produce; and the amount and quality of milk they produce.

The key person in the milk testing and record keeping process is the DHIA supervisor, who visits each dairy on a regular basis to gather production, breeding, feeding and identification information about each animal.

The supervisor takes milk samples to the Delaware Department of Agriculture in Dover for analysis. Results of these tests are forwarded to the Northeast Dairy Records Processing Laboratory at Cornell University for computer processing. The farmer can then use the resultant computer printout of the records when making management decisions, explains Delaware extension dairy specialist Dr. George F.W. Haenlein.

Each county has its own testing unit or authority, under the advice of the county agent. Anyone interested in finding out about the possibility of becoming a DHIA supervisor should contact a county extension agent.

Lime in Fall avoids compacted soils

NEWARK, Del. - If plant roots or helpful soil organisms could talk they might shout something like "Get off!" or "I can't breathe!" whenever a heavily loaded lime or fertilizer truck passes over the field on a late winter or spring day. The oxygen they need for survival is forced out of the soil as pores or air pockets collapse from the weight of the heavy equipment.

Roots need oxygen if they're to develop energy needed to push through the soil to secure nutrients and water, warns University of Delaware extension agronomist Dr. William H. Mitchell. Without a plentiful supply of air, soil bacteria will even turn to fertilizer materials such as nitrate nitrogen for their oxygen supply. Having lost some of its oxygen, the nitrogen becomes unstable and escapes into the air. Now the plant roots have lost both badly needed oxygen and nitrogen. They can't function well and the end result is a yield loss.

If the lime or fertilizer truck had passed over the field at some other time–almost any other time–the result would have been less damaging, says Mitchell. In late winter or early spring the soil is moist, soft and loose as a result of winter rains, cool weather and freezing-thawing action. It is more easily compressed or compacted then than at any other time of year.

These are the days to work at your desk, order the garden seed or repair equipment. But stay off the land!

If you can remember following the plow and a pair of horses, you will recall how the soil stuck to your boots when it was too moist for working. Now you're in a cab many feet above the ground and the condition of the soil isn't as obvious to you. And of course you have flotation tires, duals, 4-wheel drive and plenty of power. So a little sticky soil may be shrugged off as a minor nuisance. But the best evidence from research tests and farm experience suggests that serious yield losses may result from such traffic on loose soils in the spring.

Compaction rarely occurs on dry soil. For this reason soils are generally less vulnerable in the fall than during the late winter and early spring

No-tillage methods will reduce the amount of equipment traffic, which is a decided advantage for this type of cropping system. But even no-tillage fields can be damaged by heavy equipment, if the soil is loose and moist, cautions the agronomist.

Since lime applied in the late summer or fall will generally be accompanied by less soil compaction than when applied in the spring, he recommends you plan to put it down following your crop harvest.

Phosphorous and potassium fertilizers can also be truck-spread in the fall since there's no danger of leaching losses, even on sandy soils. Again, there will be less compaction than would occur if you delayed the job until March or April.

Delaware announces state landscape winners

NEWARK, Del. - Winners of the state's first landscaping contest have now been announced. Sponsored by the Delaware Association of Nurserymen, the competition was designed to call attention to some of the many fine landscape plantings around the state—both private and commercial. And judging by the first crop of winners, the contest is a good idea.

Contestants could compete in one of four categories: entry garden, outdoor living, special garden and public area. Winners include: Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Lincoln, 3336 Silverside Rd., Colonial Woods, (entry garden); Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Grass, Bellefonte, (outdoor living); Mr. and Mrs. E. I. Bramble, 108 Pierce Rd., Deerhurst, (special garden); and Concord Plaza Associates, 3411 Silverside Rd., (public area). By coincidence all four of this year's winning landscapes are in the Wilmington area.

Judging was based on overall landscape design—how well this relates to the site; suitability for purpose or function; effective use of structures and paving; use and selection of plant material; and maintenance, including neatness, proper pruning and health of plants.

The Lincoln entry garden is used to provide off-the-road parking along a busy thoroughfare. Judges considered it a very good use of plant material in a confined space. To create this easy-care garden, the original lawn in front of the house was replaced with a curving macadem drive and a small landscaped mound which screens it from the road. The mound is planted with a choice assortment of slow growing needle evergreens. The result: a very strong sense of "entering", as you approach along the drive.

The garden was designed by professional landscape architect Allen J. Ferver, who was asked to come up with "something unique which didn't include grass." Lincoln did the planting himself nine years ago.

The sunny patio of Ed and Peggy Bramble in Deerhurst was singled out by the judges because of the very relaxed environment and the uniformity of effect (in spite of a variety of geraniums, begonias and other flowering plants in pots and containers)—like being in an outdoor room. Which is exactly the way the Brambles (both retired) use it.

The judges were particularly impressed with another winner—the one created by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Grass in Bellefonte. Special features cited here were the excellent use of different paving materials and the creation of a beautiful landscape screen with broadleaf evergreens. This was considered the most inviting of all the landscapes entered in the contest, one well-suited for outdoor living.

Final winner in the 1979 landscaping contest was the public landscape around the complex of office buildings at Concord Plaza on Silverside Road. The well laid out "campus" effect was considered an excellent use of space and site planning. Much of the present landscaping consists of trees and other plant materials present before construction was begun.

Winners in each category received a certificate worth $100 for plants or services from any member of the Delaware Association of Nurserymen.

One purpose of this contest was to stimulate interest in better, more attractive landscapes, explains University of Delaware extension horticulturist Dr. Charles Dunham. In spite of many highly successful plantings throughout the state, many homeowners still think of a landscape pretty much in terms of that defined by the Federal Home Administration (FHA): "some grass, four shrubs and a tree."

But there's obviously much more that can be done on a home lot to make it more livable for the occupants and also more appealing for those who pass by each day. The categories chosen for this year's contest suggest some of the many considerations involved in developing a fully landscaped lot. And a look at the winners shows what's possible, no matter how big or small the space to be planted.

ASA opposes rail increase

ST. LOUIS, Mo. - The American Soybean Association opposes 20 percent freight rate increases proposed by the Southern Freight Association (SFA).

"We believe this proposal, which would increase freight rates during the peak harvest season only, discriminates against farmers throughout the South. While seasonal demand for freight cars does cause some temporary addition to work load, it also increases freight revenue in direct proportion and should adequately defray costs."

"If a rate increase is necessary to pay costs of running a railroad, then these costs should be identified and rate increases considered for the entire year."

WHAT'S NEW

Hog Hunter Holding Crate

A heavy-duty hog-holding crate that allows for faster and safer operations on individual animals has been developed by Wadler Manufacturing Company of Galena, Kansas.

The Hog Hunter Holding Crate includes as standard equipment the Hog Hunter Headgate, which adjusts automatically to hold almost any size hog. The firm holding control makes ringing, medical testing, vaccinating, ear-marking and other hog operations much safer and faster.

The Holding Crate is designed with a side gate that releases the animal easily when an operation is completed. The crate is built of heavy-duty steel and includes a steel floor for easier animal control. Sturdy oak skids make the crate portable.

The Hog Hunter Holding Crate is 72-inches long, 36-inches high and weights 256 lbs. The Hog Hunter Headgate has a maximum holding zone of 13 1/2-inches.

Fall is season to prune shrubs

MEDIA — Homeowners are asking if it's all right to prune their trees and shrubs in the summertime. Only in an emergency. You should wait until the weather gets cooler, perhaps in September, before you do any extensive pruning. The regrowth will be less and won't get nipped by an early frost. However, if you have broken limbs and branches as the result of high winds before a thunderstorm, or, if branches are causing a hazard such as rubbing against the house or hanging over the driveway, they should be taken off flush with the trunk of the tree. For years we thought it necessary to cover pruning wounds with tree paint if the wound was over one inch in diameter. Recent work by plant pathologists with the U.S. Forest Service have show that this is not necessary. Covering tree wounds with tree paint does not decrease decay but merely satisfies the owner that he has done something to help the tree. But some evidence indicates that healing may be retarded by tree paints. Dead limbs and branches should be removed just as soon as you notice them to avoid tree rot. The Pennsylvania Cooperative Extension Service offers educational programs and materials without regard to race, color, sex or national origin and is also an equal opportunity empolyer.

Lake Aldred areas open

LANCASTER - Picnic areas owned by Pennsylvania Power & Light Co. in the Lake Aldred area, which were severely damaged by ice jams and high waters earlier this year, have been restored and are now open for public use.

George R. Aukamp, lake superintendent, said most of the damage occurred at picnic facilities along the Pequea Creek near the village of Pequea and at the Otter Creek recreation area.

Lake Aldred is an eight-mile impoundment of the lower Susquehanna River that stores water for PP&L's Holtwood hydroelectric station. PP&L owns and maintains recreational facilities surrounding the lake. The facilities include campgrounds, picnic areas, hiking trails and boat launching areas.
